1955 PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS

The top-ranking new Presidential nomination in 1955 was that of Marion B. Folsom as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, on July 20; the Senate confirmed his nomination July 11. Folsom, former Under Secretary of the Treasury, succeeded Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, who resigned July 13 as Secretary of HEW.

John Marshall Harlan, of New York, was nominated Jan. 10 as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, succeeding the late Justice Robert H. Jackson. The appointment first had been submitted in the closing days of the 83rd Congress but action was deferred until 1955. Harlan's nomination was confirmed by the Senate March 16 by a 71-11 roll-call vote. (For more detailed story, see p. 668.)

Wilber M. Brucker was confirmed by voice vote of the Senate July 11 as Secretary of the Army, succeeding Robert T. Stevens, who resigned June 22. Brucker, a former Republican governor of Michigan, served as general counsel of the Defense Department prior to his Army appointment.

President Eisenhower Aug. 11 named Donald A. Quarles as Secretary of Air Force. Quarles was given a recess appointment to succeed Harold E. Talbott, who resigned Aug. 1 during a Senate investigation of his outside business interests. (See p. 510.)

Quarles, former engineer and administrator for Bell Telephone Laboratories and Western Electric Co., had been Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Development since Sept. 1, 1953.

The Senate July 22 confirmed Reuben B. Robertson as Deputy Secretary of Defense. The Senate Armed Services Committee July 21 said Robertson would have to divest himself of shares in two stock holdings to avoid any conflict of interest between his new government post and his former private business. Robertson, an official of the second Hoover Commission on reorganization of the government, succeeded Robert B. Anderson, who resigned July 11.

Rear Adm. Arleigh A. Burke was nominated by President Eisenhower May 25 to succeed Adm. Robert B. Carney as Chief of Naval Operations. The Senate confirmed his nomination June 6. Burke, who ranked 93rd on the Navy's list of line admirals, was a leader of the 1949 "revolt of the admirals" against dependence on the Air Force's B-36 bomber as the nation's principal strategic weapon. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, pp. 499ff.)

The Senate June 6 confirmed the May 13 nomination of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor to succeed Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway as Army Chief of Staff. Gen. Taylor was commander of the 101st Airborne Division in World War II and commander of the Eighth Army during the Korean War.

The Senate Aug. 2, on a 49-29 roll-call vote, confirmed Harold C. Patterson of Virginia as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. His nomination was opposed by Democratic Senators on grounds he was an "Eisenhower Democrat" who would not properly represent the Democratic party on the SEC. (For more detailed story, see p. 669.)

Ex-Rep. John B. Hollister (R Ohio, 1931-37) was designated by President Eisenhower April 30 to head the International Cooperation Administration, which took over functions of the Foreign Operations Administration when that agency expired June 30. The Senate confirmed the nomination June 15. Hollister, a law partner of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio, 1939-53), had been serving as executive director of the Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

NOMINATIONS UNCONFIRMED

Five new U.S. circuit court judges were confirmed in 1955 but two nominations were still pending when Congress adjourned:

Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff of Baltimore July 14 was nominated to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. Because of his part in the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the public schools, Sobeloff's nomination was questioned by opponents of integration. In the security-risk firing of Dr. John P. Peters as consultant to the Public Health Service, Sobeloff declined to sign the Justice Department brief before the Supreme Court defending the action against Peters. This was described as the first public break by a Solicitor General on a major policy question in 20 years.

Warren E. Burger, of Minnesota, was nominated June 21 to be U. S. circuit judge, District of Columbia circuit. Burger, an Assistant Attorney General, was floor manager for Harold E. Stassen at the 1952 GOP convention, had been a practicing attorney and professor of law and was a member of the Minnesota Governor's Interracial Commission.

Ex-Rep. John S. Wood (D Ga., 1931-35, 1945-52) was nominated March 4 to be a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board. His nomination was indorsed by Sens. Walter F. George (D Ga.) and Richard B. Russell (D Ga.). Accused of past membership in the Klu Klux Klan, Wood said he had joined, later walked out of the organization. He denied that, as one-time chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, he had tried to "block" an investigation of the Klan. Former Gov. Francis A. Cherry (D) of Arkansas Oct. 5 was given a recess appointment as a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board.

NOMINATION WITHDRAWN

Allen Whitfield (R), Des Moines, Iowa, attorney, July 8 asked President Eisenhower to withdraw his nomination as an Atomic Energy Commission member. Whitfield, whose nomination had been pending since March 16, said he had been asked to disclose to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee his clients' confidential affairs. Even if he were confirmed, Whitfield said, "my services might involve the Atomic Energy Commission in political controversy..." The President July 12 withdrew the nomination.

On Oct. 10 he gave a recess appointment to Harold S. Vance, chairman of the Studebaker-Packard Corp., as the new AEC member.

During 1955 the President sent 40,686 nominations to the Senate; three were rejected (all postmasters), 15 were withdrawn and 39,897 were confirmed. Mr. Eisenhower requested Senate approval of 20,753 nominations in 1953; 45,917 in 1954.

Rep. Robert H. Mollohan (D W. Va.) May 25 said the Eisenhower Administration was "moving the military" into top civilian posts in the government. He made public a list of 34 retired military officers who were serving or recently had served in top civilian posts. "This is a very bad trend," Mollohan declared. "The farther apart you keep the military and the civil government, the better." Mollohan singled out the Immigration and Naturalization Service, headed by Gen. J.M. Swing (ret.), for criticism.

HALL CONFIRMATION

NOMINATED -- John A. Hall, Jan. 10, 1955, to be Director of Locomotive Inspection for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

REPORTED ADVERSELY -- Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, 6-9, July 20.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate July 29, by a roll-call vote, 43-41. (See p. 134.)

John A. Hall had served as acting director of Locomotive Inspection, Interstate Commerce Commission, since Oct. 5, 1954, under a recess appointment. The Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, after subcommittee hearings, adversely reported the nomination July 20.

Senate

The Senate confirmed Hall's nomination July 29 by a 43-41 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 134.)

DEBATE -- John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- Hall's nomination was supported by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (Ind.), of which he was a member, but opposed by the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (Ind.) and the International Association of Machinists (AFL), who said precedent called for choosing the director from among the ICC's inspection service. The ICC unanimously voted to support the nomination because of Hall's 11-year experience as a diesel engineer.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- In 1952 most of the railway unions supported the Democratic ticket but the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers supported Mr. Eisenhower. Hall was their choice for the inspection job.

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- "The position...requires something besides a knowledge of how to run a locomotive." Hall never took a civil service exam for an inspector's position and "the preponderance of testimony" indicated he was not qualified to administer the position of chief locomotive inspector.

JUSTICE HARLAN

NOMINATED -- John Marshall Harlan, Jan. 10, 1955, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. (His name was submitted to the 83rd Congress on Nov. 9, 1954.)

APPROVED -- Senate Judiciary Committee, 10-4, March 9.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate March 16, by roll-call vote, 71-11. (See p. 119.)

Four months after he was first nominated as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, John Marshall Harlan was approved for the position by the Senate on March 16, 1955. While the nomination was pending the Supreme Court held in abeyance hearings on its 1954 decree against segregation in public schools.

Harlan's nomination was President Eisenhower's second appointment to the Supreme Court. The first was Chief Justice Earl Warren. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 399.)

Background

Harlan was named to succeed Justice Robert H. Jackson, who died on Oct. 9, 1954. At the time of nomination he was serving as U.S. Circuit Judge of the second circuit. President Eisenhower had named him to that post on Jan. 13, 1954 and the Senate confirmed the appointment Feb 9.

Harlan's nomination to the Supreme Court was first sent to the Senate on Nov. 9, 1954 during the session called to act on the censure resolution of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.). Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.) requested the Judiciary Committee to postpone action on the nomination until the 84th Congress met in January, 1955.

Counsel for the Committee said letters of objection had been received involving three protests: that Harlan had been a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, was a member of the advisory board of Atlantic Union, and was inexperienced. The Committee voted Nov. 23, 1954 to postpone action.

On Dec. 2, Sen. William Langer (R N.D.) said he would "fight" confirmation of Harlan and hoped his opposition would force President Eisenhower to appoint men from "small states" to high federal posts.

Senate

On Jan. 10, 1955 President Eisenhower resubmitted to the Senate Judge Harlan's nomination to the Supreme Court. The President Feb. 2 termed the Senate's delay in confirming Harlan "unfortunate." He said "...I think it is too bad that the delay seems necessary in the eyes of the Committee..."

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 24, 25.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 24 -- Joseph M. Proskauer, former New York state judge and one-time chairman of the New York State Crime Commission, representing the New York County Lawyers' Association, supported the nomination and quoted a letter submitted to the Committee by attorney John W. Davis stating that Harlan was an accomplished lawyer, a man of the highest character who would "fill with distinction a place on the Supreme Court."

Herman Methfessel, attorney of Miami, Fla., and a former district attorney of Richmond County, N.Y., testified Harlan's "attitude toward cross examination and...the right of a person to defend himself is not the attitude that I feel should be carried to the Supreme Court."

Edward J. Fox, Jr., chairman, Committee on Federal Judiciary, American Bar Association, stated it was the "unqualified recommendation" of the committee, acting for the ABA, that the nomination be confirmed. Whitney N. Seymour, on behalf of the Bar Association of the City of New York, Wendell Berge, attorney of Washington, D.C. and former Assistant Attorney General, and Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) testified in support of the nomination.

ATLANTIC UNION CRITICIZED

Merwin K. Hart, president, National Economic Council, Inc. asked the Committee to "reject the nomination...and not to confirm any nominee who is not known to be in favor of America first." He said that Harlan was a member of the National Advisory Council of the Atlantic Union, an organization, he claimed, that was designed to surrender the sovereignty of the U.S. to a group of nations that would comprise one government.

Feb. 25 -- George Racey Jordan, representing the American Coalition, Harry F. Klinefelter, insurance agent of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, legislative representative of the Wheel of Progress, opposed the nomination. They contended Harlan's membership in the Atlantic Union should bar him from the Supreme Court.

Judge Harlan testified that he was not a member of the Atlantic Union itself and had never attended any of its functions, was "not a one-worlder", and did not believe in surrendering American sovereignty. Declining to answer questions on how he might rule on issues involving the Constitution and treaty making powers of the Executive, he said "a nominee to high judicial office would commit the gravest indiscretion...in expressing views as to how he would vote on issues that have not yet come before him and may come before him as a member of the Court."

(Sen. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) March 1 denounced as "ridiculous" opposition to Harlan's appointment because of his association with the Atlantic Union. Kefauver said "approximately 150 past and present members... of Congress, the Vice President, Cabinet officials, and other leading citizens were affiliated with the organization.")

ACTION-- The Committee voted 10-4, March 9, to report the nomination to the Senate. Voting against the nomination were James O. Eastland (D Miss.), Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), William Langer (R N.D.), and Herman Welker (R Idaho). Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) voted "present." Welker said he could not vote for confirmation because he was not satisfied that Harlan "adheres to the doctrine that American sovereignty cannot and must not be diluted."

Floor Action

The Senate March 16, by a 71-11 roll-call vote, confirmed the nomination of John Marshall Harlan to the Supreme Court. (For voting, see chart, p. 119.)

DEBATE -- The principal opposition to Harlan's appointment was expressed on grounds that he refused to take a position on the so-called Bricker amendment, was a member of the advisory board of the Atlantic Union Committee, and did not have sufficient judicial experience. He had been a circuit court judge since March 4, 1954.

Sens. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), John C. Stennis (D Miss.) and Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (D N.C.) -- The Supreme Court needed men with more judicial experience who understood the "restraint of precedent."

James O. Eastland (D Miss.) -- Opposed the nomination on three grounds: Harlan's failure to say whether treaties take precedence over the Constitution; sponsorship of the appointment by "Thomas E. Dewey and his henchmen;" and Harlan's New York residence. He denied allegations that opposition to the appointment by southern Senators stemmed from concern over the Supreme Court's position on segregation.

Speaking for the nomination were Harley M. Kilgore (D W. Va.), H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.), Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) and Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.).

PATTERSON TO SEC

NOMINATED -- Harold C. Patterson, May 20, 1955, to be a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

APPROVED -- Senate Banking and Currency Committee, 8-6, July 27.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate Aug. 2, by a roll-call vote of 49-29. (For voting, see p. 135.)

Harold C. Patterson, a former partner in Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath, New York Stock Exchange members, was nominated by President Eisenhower May 20 to the Securities and Exchange Commission. He was director of the SEC's Division of Trading and Exchanges.

Under the law, three members of the SEC must be members of the majority political party, two must be members of the minority party. Patterson, a Virginian who voted for Mr. Eisenhower in 1952, filled a Democratic vacancy on the SEC for a term ending June, 1960.

Senate

Patterson's appointment was confirmed by the Senate Aug. 2 on a 49-29 roll call vote. One Republican -- William Langer (N.D.) -- joined 28 Democrats in opposing the nomination. (For voting, see chart, p. 135.)

DEBATE -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "An Eisenhower Democrat is not a Democrat within the meaning of the law which sets up bipartisan commissions... We are making the record today that what is happening under the Eisenhower Administration is a breakdown of the two-party system with respect to independent agencies. The Administration is not filling them with Republicans and Democrats. It is filling them with Republicans and Eisenhower Democrats."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- The Administration had treated independent and quasi-judicial agencies as "mere tools and instruments of the Administration's will... How can anyone claim that this man would represent the Democratic philosophy of life on a bipartisan quasi-judicial board....?"

Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- "It amazes me to hear the question raised as to whether or not he (Patterson) is or is not a true Democrat.... Certainly when a man who has been honest and forthright before a committee of the Senate is asked what his party affiliation is and says 'I am a Democrat,' to ask him whether he is a Stevenson Democrat or a Kefauver Democrat or some other kind of Democrat is going pretty far."

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- Confirmation of Patterson "will be creating an issue for the Democratic Party in the campaign of 1956..."

LOBBY ROUNDUP

Pressure Group Activity Shaped Key 1955 Decisions, Offers Clue to Future Special Interest Drives

Intensive lobby activity shaped key decisions during the first session of the 84th Congress and offered a preview of the pressure drives expected in 1956.

Major lobby drives were set in motion when Congress considered highway, power, water resources, natural gas, farm price supports, school aid, housing, and tax programs. All should be lobby issues again in 1956.

Lobby efforts to shape reciprocal trade, military reserves and minimum wage legislation apparently ended, at least for the time being, when compromise legislation was enacted. But some groups, dissatisfied with the measures, said they would press for revision.

Left hanging when Congress adjourned were such controversial issues as sugar quotas, Upper Colorado and Fryingpan-Arkansas reclamation projects, and the Dixon-Yates and Hells Canyon power disputes. Lobby pressures should be intense on these issues in 1956.

Major Lobby Fights

Congressional Quarterly's annual lobby roundup tells what the lobbies wanted and what they got on major issues in the first session of the 84th Congress:

RECIPROCAL TRADE

• What Freer-Trade Lobbies Wanted -- Led by the Committee for a National Trade Policy, a lobby coalition backed a bill (HR 1) to extend the reciprocal trade program. The League of Women Voters, the Committee on Foreign Trade Education, the National Council of Jewish Women, the National Farmers Union, and the CIO were all active in the fight to ease trade restrictions. These groups urged that the President be given more authority to simplify customs procedure and cut tariffs. They also supported the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade and the proposal to set up the Organization for Trade Cooperation as secretariat for GATT.

• What High-Tariff Lobbies Wanted -- Opposition to the freer-trade groups was spearheaded by the American Tariff League and the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy. Spokesmen for these groups argued that HR 1 would give the President too much authority over tariff-making and seriously injure many domestic industries. Industries such as coal, oil, textiles, chemicals, wool, and cattle claimed injury from imports under current laws. Representatives of these groups aimed at having major amendments -- such as a quota on oil imports -- tacked onto HR 1.

• What Congress Did -- Congress June 15 completed action on HR 1 (PL 118). As enacted, the measure authorized a three-year extension and broadened the President's tariff-making authority. The final version authorized the President to limit imports threatening "to impair national security," while broadening the Tariff Commission's power to recommend action to relieve any industry suffering "seriously" from import competition. The bill also specifically stated that enactment would not indicate approval or disapproval of GATT. No action was taken on OTC. The House rejected 11 amendments, among them the proposed oil quota. (See pp. 289ff.)

RESERVE PROGRAM

• What Veterans and Patriotic Lobbies Wanted -- Support for a major overhaul of the military reserve system came from a loosely-knit group of veterans and patriotic organizations called the National Security Committee. Leadership was provided by the American Legion and the Reserve Officers Association with aid from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Veterans of World War II, and the Disabled American Veterans. Some business groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., also supported an expanded reserve program. The Legion was particularly active in support of a "strong" reserve bill, which provided a reserve obligation of five years. The Legion felt young men should serve three years in the reserves after two years of active duty, or 4½ years in the reserves after completing "not less than 1,000 hours" (four months, by Legion figures) of military training. The Legion also favored a compulsory provision -- authority to recall for additional duty men who failed to serve satisfactorily in the reserves.

• What Labor, Farm, and Church Lobbies Wanted -- Opposition to the reserve program was led by the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and the National Farmers Union. These long-time opponents of any form of peacetime military training instead favored world disarmament, humanitarian work by the United Nations, and cuts in the military establishment. The National Association of Secondary School Principals opposed provisions that might induce young people to leave high school before graduation; the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People wanted an anti-segregation provision.

• What Congress Did -- Lawmakers passed a compromise reserve program that would require five years of active- and ready-reserve service and an additional one-year standby reserve obligation for men inducted after the bill was enacted. Reservists not meeting training requirements could be inducted for 45 days' service per year. The bill also provided for 250,000 voluntary enlistments annually of youths 17 to 18½ years of age to serve three to six months on active duty and 7½ years in the ready reserve. The Reserve bill (HR 7000) was signed (PL 305) by President Eisenhower on Aug. 9. (See pp. 334ff.)

HIGHWAY PROGRAM

• What Highway Industry Lobbies Wanted -- An Administration proposal to spend $101 billion on roads in 10 years found many groups agreeing over "principle" but differing over details and financing. The American Road Builders Association approved of the program, but wanted to insure that regular federal aid to highways was not "frozen" as a result. The Automobile Manufacturers Association favored a "large" program that would include research in materials and highway design. The Truck Trailers Manufacturers Association wanted an expanded highway program financed by a highway user tax.

• What Highway User Lobbies Wanted -- The American Automobile Association and the National Association of Motor Bus Operators led the fight against toll roads. The American Farm Bureau Federation also opposed toll roads as well as any increase in federal contributions for highway construction. The American Trucking Associations favored a highway program, but insisted on a "fair" highway user tax on truckers. The Private Truck Council of America, Inc., wanted users to assume "proper" share of the cost

• What Local Government Officials Wanted -- The American Association of State Highway Officials wanted 100 percent federal financing of construction on the interstate system, with state maintenance after completion. The National Association of County Officials pleaded for "adequate" attention to secondary roads.

• What Congress Did -- The Senate May 25 passed a bill (S 1048) to provide nearly $17.3 billion for a highway program over a five-year period. The measure included no financial provisions. The House July 27 rejected a proposed highway bill (HR 747) to raise gasoline and other taxes by $12.4 billion to help pay for a 13-year $48.5 billion highway program. The House also rejected the Administration proposal for a highway plan financed by sale of 30-year bonds. House Democratic leaders blamed defeat of the pay-as-you-go program on lobbyists for trucking interests. (See pp. 431ff.)

POWER

• What Public Power Lobbies Wanted -- Public Power forces concentrated most of their efforts on the Dixon-Yates and Hells Canyon issues. Public power groups wanted the federal government to build a single, multi-purpose high dam at Hells Canyon on the Snake River, about 90 miles north of Wieser, Idaho. These groups -- led by the National Hells Canyon Association, the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, and the American Public Power Association -- argued that greater economic development would be possible with the high dam and that the government would benefit from the broadened tax base. NRECA and APPA were leading opponents of the Dixon-Yates power contract. The contract would have permitted the Tennessee Valley Authority to purchase needed additional electric power from a private power combine made up of Middle South Utilities, Inc. (Edgar H. Dixon, president) and the Southern Company (Eugene A. Yates, chairman.) Public power groups said the contract would be a "surrender" to the private power companies and would "destroy TVA."

• What Private Power Lobbies Wanted -- The National Association of Electric Companies backed the Idaho Power Co.'s bid to build three small dams on the Snake River in place of the single federal dam. NAEC argued that the high dam would cost more and would have a poorer tax yield. Private power intetests also claimed Idaho power's plan was in line with the Administration's "partnership" power policy. NAEC, as well as some business groups interested in getting government out of commercial enterprises, also supported the Dixon-Yates contract. The groups argued that rates under the contract would be lower than any other AEC contract for power, that the private companies were "competent and able to do the job," and that they should have "the opportunity to help supply power needed for atomic development."

• What Congress Did -- Congress July 7 voted (HR 6766 -- PL 163) $6.5 million for transmission lines to link the proposed Dixon-Yates plant to the TVA system. Without the lines no Dixon-Yates power could be delivered to TVA. Congress stipulated, however, that if Memphis, Tenn., decided to build its own power plant (thereby relieving demands for TVA power), the funds would be withheld. On July 11, after Memphis said it would build its own plant, the Administration cancelled the Dixon-Yates contract. On Aug. 22 the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee reported that the Administration used "sly and clever" tactics to hide details of the contract. (See pp. 227ff. and 533ff.)

On Hells Canyon, a House Subcommittee July 27 approved a bill (HR 4719) which would authorize $484 million for federal construction of the Hells Canyon project. However, on Aug. 4 the Federal Power Commission granted the Idaho Power Co. permission to build three dams on the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon. On Sept. 29 FPC denied an application for a new hearing on Hells Canyon made by the National Hells Canyon Association, NRECA, and eight Washington State Public utility districts. (See pp. 449ff.)

MINIMUM WAGE

• What Labor Lobbies Wanted -- Labor channeled its major efforts behind a drive to achieve revision of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. The CIO and AFL urged an increase in the minimum wage from 75 cents an hour to $1.25 an hour. They also recommended that minimum wage benefits be extended to several million more workers. Two special groups -- the Joint Minimum Wage Committee and the Citizens' Committee on a Fair Labor Standards Act -- were founded to muster support of local officials and civic groups. Labor lobbies contended the existing minimum wage lagged behind wages, living costs, and productivity. Labor also argued that its proposal would assure low-income families a "decent living" standard while bolstering the economy.

• What Industry Lobbies Wanted -- Leading the opposition to any change in the current law were the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. Both groups opposed any raise in the minimum wage and any extension of minimum wage benefits to additional workers. They argued that the raise would have a "disemployment tendency" by eliminating some marginal operations, inducing a spiral of wage increases to maintain differentials for workers within industries. This, they contended, would seriously affect the financial position of many companies. Industry also pointed out that the minimum wage offsets regional wage differentials and thus deters a special attraction to capital investment where it is needed.

• What the Administration Wanted -- The Administration asked that the minimum wage be raised to 90 cents an hour.

• What Congress Did -- The Senate June 8 passed a bill (S 2168) to increase the minimum wage from 75 cents an hour to $1 an hour effective Jan. 1, 1956. The House July 20 passed a minimum wage bill (HR 7214) providing for a similar increase effective March 31, 1956. Neither house made any attempt to extend or alter the coverage of the Act. Congress accepted the main features of the House version on July 30. The President signed the bill (PL 381) on Aug. 12. (See pp. 321ff.)

HOUSING

• What Pro-Public Housing Lobbies Wanted -- Lobbyists initially expected little change in the public housing provisions enacted in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 198ff.) The Senate, however, June 7 passed a housing bill (S 2126), and groups immediately began scurrying around for support in the House. Supported by the AFL, CIO, and the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Housing Conference conducted an impromptu drive for 200,000 public housing units a year until the 1949 authorization of 810,000 units was reached, special housing for elderly persons, an expanded urban redevelopment program, and an increase in federal loans for advance planning of community facilities.

• What Anti-Public Housing Lobbies Wanted -- Opposition to any public housing program was led by the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the National Association of Home Builders. The former urged Congress to "terminate the public housing program, (and)...liquidate" existing public housing projects. Both groups commended the urban redevelopment program. The U.S. Savings and Loan League urged independence of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and backed the NAREB and the NAHB in their stand against public housing.

• What Congress Did -- The Senate June 7 passed a bill (S 2126) to extend and enlarge federal housing legislation. An amendment to substitute the Administration's plan for construction of 35,000 public housing units annually for two years was rejected. As passed, the bill called for construction of 135,000 units annually, until the authorized total of 810,000, set in the Housing Act of 1949, was reached. The House July 29 passed a "skelton" version of S 2126, after first removing all public housing provisions. On Aug. 2 Congress completed action on a compromise version of S 2126 which authorized 45,000 units of public housing through July 31, 1956, and removed restrictions imposed in 1954. The bill also increased the authorization for assistance in slum clearance and urban redevelopment by $200 million for fiscal 1956 and 1957 and set up the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as an independent agency no longer affiliated with the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The bill was signed (PL 345) on Aug. 11. (See pp. 253ff.)

NATURAL GAS

• What Pro-Regulation Lobbies Wanted -- Mayors of many cities using natural gas repeatedly urged Congress to continue federal control of natural gas sales in interstate commerce. In Washington, the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, the AFL, CIO, and Americans for Democratic Action supported federal regulation. All argued that a release from government control would mean an increase in the price of natural gas.

• What Anti-Regulation Lobbies Wanted -- With the aid of two special units, the General Gas Committee and the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee, the Independent Natural Gas Association led a campaign to release gas from federal control. The groups concentrated publicity efforts in areas of heaviest gas consumption. Anti-regulation groups argued that because of the "hazardous" nature of discovery and the "vigorously competitive" market, federal regulation would result in "diminished supplies" of natural gas.

• What Congress Did -- The House July 28 passed a bill (HR 6645) to exempt gatherers and producers of natural gas from federal regulation. The Senate took no action on the measure. However, the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee July 28 reported S 1853 (S Rept 1219), amended by substitution of the text of HR 6645. (See pp. 454ff.)

GOVERNMENT-IN-BUSINESS

• What Get-Government-out-of-Business Lobbies Wanted -- The National Associated Businessmen, Inc., and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. carried the load in supporting legislation to force the federal government to discontinue its many business enterprises. These enterprises, largely operated by the Defense Department, include airlines, laundries, bakeries, and grocery stores. Pressure groups cited Congressional committee statistics showing that the government was operating some 100 business enterprises with a total investment of at least $40 billion. The NAB, "determined to improve" this situation, backed a bill (HR 687) to put Congress on record as opposed to federal competition with private business and to give the Bureau of the Budget power to veto any new government activity which would compete with private business. The drive was favored by the Bureau of the Budget and the second (Hoover) Commission for the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. (See pp. 367ff.)

• What Government Employee Unions Wanted -- Led by the Government Employees Council (AFL) federal employees unions urged safeguards against "indiscriminate waste" of public funds while cutting back on business activities. The District Lodge No. 44 of the International Association of Machinists (AFL) and the American Federation of Government Employees (AFL) wanted Congressional supervision over the proposed cutback.

• What Congress Did -- Congress took no action on HR 687, but did add provisions to appropriations bills which spelled out a cutback policy. On June 30 Congress cleared the Defense Appropriations bill (HR 6042 -- PL 157) which contained a provision which would prevent shifting to private industry work that the government had been doing for three years without first giving the House and Senate Appropriations Committees 90 days advance notice. On July 30 the Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 7278 -- PL 219) was passed with a provision to bar use of Defense Department funds for "construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or dry-cleaning facility" at U.S. bases, unless the Secretary of Defense certified that similar services were unavailable from "commercial sources at reasonable rates." (See pp. 219ff. and 242ff.)

INCOME-EXCISE TAXES

• Lobbies Favoring Across-the-Board Tax Cuts -- Liberal and labor groups were quick to support a Democratic proposal to cut personal income taxes by $20 for each exemption. The proposal was offered as an amendment to a bill (HR 4259) extending existing excise taxes for one year. The CIO and Americans for Democratic Action, early backers of the proposal, argued that the tax cut would give relief to the lower brackets, thus adding to spending and giving the economy a needed boost. They also argued that excise taxes should be reduced and eventually eliminated on a priority basis, opposed any general sales tax or manufacturers' excise tax as "socially and economically unsound."

• Lobbies Opposing Across-the-Board Tax Cuts -- The National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. took the lead in opposing the $20 cut. Both groups said the proposal would lead to a "spiral of inflation." Instead they proposed a series of five reductions lowering the progressive element of each rate bracket 16 percent so that the top income tax rate would be 35 percent. They also argued for a replacement of existing excises by a uniform excise tax on end products of manufacture.

• What Congress Did -- Congress voted (PL 18) to extend existing excise taxes for one year, but refused to reduce individual income taxes. (See pp. 419ff.)

PRICE SUPPORTS

• What Flexible Support Lobbies Wanted -- The American Farm Bureau Federation made a determined stand in support of the flexible farm price support program (82.5 to 90 percent of parity) enacted by the 83rd Congress. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 100ff.) Assisted by some farm commodity and business groups, the Federation argued that farmer income would be maintained at the "highest possible" levels if the price system were permitted to serve as the main balance wheel between supply and demand. It also argued that increased farm efficiency, lower costs, and market expansion at home and abroad was the "sound" way to stop the drop in net farm income which it attributed to rigid supports.

• What Rigid Support Lobbies Wanted -- The National Farmers Union, supported by the CIO and AFL, were the chief promoters of a bill (HR 12) to restore rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity. The Farmers Union claimed the flexible support program was a "serious mistake" and "unworkable by its very nature." It contended the farmer's position could not be improved "by cutting his prices and income."

• What Other Farm Lobbies Wanted -- Objecting to war-time price support levels as "too expensive" and expressing "no faith" in flexible supports, the National Grange said the farm-price program should be set up on a "commodity-by-commodity" basis. The Grange argued that no single formula could prescribe for the peculiar requirements of all commodities. The National Milk Producers Federation argued for its "self-help" program under which the dairy farmer would regulate production.

• What Congress Did -- The House passed HR 12, but no price support legislation reached the floor of the Senate. (See pp. 169ff.)

FEDERAL EMPLOYEE PAY RAISE

• What Employee Unions Wanted -- A "pocket veto" of a pay raise at the end of the 83rd Congress made postal and classified government unions more determined than ever to obtain a raise for their members in 1955. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 388ff.) The National Federation of Post Office Clerks (AFL) and the National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL) led the drive in support of a bill (S 1) to provide postal workers with a 10 percent raise, the minimum increase to be $430. The American Federation of Government Employees (AFL) was the chief spokesman for the classified workers. It backed a bill (S 67) which would grant all classified workers a 10 percent raise, the minimum increase to be $200. The Government Employees Council of 22 AFL unions provided the framework for coordination of efforts on the behalf of both postal and classified bills. The Administration proposed an average increase of 6.5 percent for postal workers, with extensive reclassification of postal jobs. For classified workers, the Administration proposed an average increase of 5 percent.

• What Congress Did -- Congress passed one bill giving postal workers an average pay increase of 8.59 percent; President Eisenhower, however, vetoed the bill, and Congress upheld the veto. Congress then passed a second postal pay raise bill (S 2061), carrying an average increase of 8 percent. S 2061 was signed (PL 68) by the President on June 10. For the classified workers, Congress amended S 67 to provide a 7.5 percent increase. The bill was passed on June 23 and signed (PL 94) by the President on June 28. The new pay boost would cover about 1,075,000 workers and cost about $328 million annually. (See pp. 360ff. and 364ff.)

FEDERAL AID TO SCHOOLS

• What School Lobbies Wanted -- A coalition of 40 national organizations pooled resources and influence in a drive for a federal aid to school construction program. Leading school groups, led by the National Education Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers, coordinated plans and worked closely with Congressional committees. Support for the educators' program came from such groups as the AFL, CIO, National Farmers Union, American Association of University Women, and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. They argued that the existing shortage of at least 340,000 classrooms, coupled with sub-standard school buildings and the short supply of teachers, made increased federal aid mandatory.

• What Other Lobbies Wanted -- The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People insisted that anti-segregation provisions be incorporated in any school aid proposal. The National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce opposed federal-aid provisions of school bills. The Council of State Chambers of Commerce took the position that school construction needs could be fully met at the state and local level without federal aid.

• What Congress Did -- The House Education and Labor Committee July 28 reported a bill (HR 7535 -- H Rept 1504) to provide $400 million annually to local school districts for school construction from July 1, 1956, to June 30, 1960. The Committee July 20 rejected an anti-segregation amendment to the bill. Hearings were held on the Senate side, but no bill was reported. (See pp. 265ff.)

SUGAR

• What Domestic Producers Wanted -- Domestic producers made a strong bid to gain a larger slice of the growing U.S. sugar market. The American Sugar Cane League of the U.S.A. and the U.S. Beet Sugar Association led the domestic bloc in its drive to revise allotments under the Sugar Act of 1948, as amended. The bloc wanted to add 188,000 tons raw value to the annual fixed quotas; it also sought the right to supply 55 percent of any excess demand when U.S. consumption topped the annual estimated requirement. Domestic producers argued that under the present law Cuba gets 96 percent of the annual growth of the U.S. sugar market, while domestic producers get only their fixed legal quotas. They further argued that scientific advances have increased production per acre and that the result has been a domestic sugar surplus with a resulting cutback in acreage to hold production to legal limits. They further claimed that the 1948 law made what was supposed to be only a temporary concession to Cuba to assist her in making an adjustment from wartime production.

• What Cuban Producers Wanted --Cuba, opposing any change in the 1948 formula, was represented by the U.S. Cuban Sugar Council and Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly and Ball, a Washington law firm engaged by Cuban sugar interests. They argued that sugar provides more than 50 percent of the total dollar exchange available to Cuba; any cut would mean a reduction in Cuba's purchasing power in the U.S. The Washington law firm engaged 23 lawyers in key manufacturing centers in the U.S. They contacted manufacturers selling products in Cuba, urged them to protect their Cuban market by asking Congressmen to make no change in the 1948 sugar formula.

• What Congress Did -- The House July 30 passed a bill (HR 7030) to create a new formula for sugar marketing quotas. The existing formula grants Cuba 96 percent and other foreign countries 4 percent of the U.S. market, after fixed quotas of 5,421,000 tons have been filled by domestic and Philippine growers. The proposed new formula would continue the fixed quotas, but permit Cuba and foreign countries to maintain the 96-4 percent ratio as long as U.S. demand stays within 8,350,000 tons. Beyond 8,350,000 tons, Cuba would get 48 percent, other foreign countries 2 percent, with the remaining 50 percent going to domestic producers. The Senate Finance Committee Aug. 1 ordered reported a bill (S 1635) amended by substitution of the text of HR 7030 with changes to provide that any increase in U.S. consumption above 8,300,000 tons be supplied 25.6 percent by Cuba, 19.4 percent by other foreign countries on the basis of their sales of sugar in the U.S. market during the past four years, and the remaining 55 percent by domestic producers. S 1635 would extend the Sugar Act to 1962, instead of 1960, as HR 7030 would do. There was no final action on the measure. (See pp. 173ff.)

Other Lobby Fights

Small Business Administration -- A battle revolved around the SBA, an agency set up to make loans to small businesses, aid them in gaining a fair share of government contracts, and counsel them on financial and management problems. SBA, created in 1953, was slated to expire in 1955. The National Federation of Independent Business and the Smaller Business Association of New England helped promote an extension of SBA's life as an independent agency. The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and the American Bankers Association favored an integrated SBA in the Department of Commerce. Congress extended the life of SBA (S 2127 -- PL 263) for two more years as an independent agency of the government. (See pp. 468ff.)

Co-ops vs. NTEA -- The National Tax Equality Association has long championed proposals to force cooperatives to pay additional taxes. NTEA in 1955 again backed legislation to require farm cooperatives to pay taxes on dividends paid on outstanding capital stock and taxes on patronage refunds distributed to members. NTEA said the "privileged" tax status of cooperatives has become a "cloak to cover competitive business operations." Opposition came from the Cooperative League of the U.S. and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. Both argued that earnings from cooperative activity were not profits, did not legally belong to the co-ops, and that the NTEA proposals were "essentially a move to destroy cooperatives." Congress took no action on the proposals in 1955.

Transportation -- A report by the Presidential Advisory Committee on Transport Policy touched off a propaganda war between competing transportation mediums. The Association of American Railroads and railroad labor brotherhoods supported a "more equitable" policy limiting power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate railroad rates, enable railroads to go into the trucking and bus business "on an equal basis," and impose user charges on airlines and waterways. The opposing groups, led by the American Trucking Associations, the Air Transport Association, and the American Waterways Operators, contended the railroads should not be allowed to "lower rates at will," and that allowing the railroads to operate trucks and airlines could lead to monopoly. Hearings on the report were held by a House Commerce Subcommittee. (See pp. 531ff.)

LOBBY SPENDING -- 1954

225 Groups Report Spending $4.3 Million in 1954, Smallest Annual Total In Lobby Law's History

Although Washington lobbyists promoted full-scale campaigns to swing votes on farm, trade, and labor legislation in 1954, they reported a new low in spending.

A total of 225 organizations spent $4,286,158.23 to influence legislation in 1954, according to reports filed with Congress and tabulated by Congressional Quarterly. This was the smallest sum reported since the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act was passed in 1946. Spending rose from $5 million in 1947 to more than $10 million in 1950, then dropped off to $4,445,841 in 1953.

Has the high cost of lobbying really gone down? It's not likely. What's happened is that lobbyists have changed their ideas about the kind of spending they have to report.

Constitutionality of the 1946 Act has been challenged on several occasions. In 1954, the U.S. Supreme Court, ruling in the case of U.S. vs. Harriss, narrowed the definition of lobying. (See CQ Almanac Vol. X, 1954, p. 674.) As a result, several organizations changed their method of reporting expenditures.

For example, the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., which reported spending $91,000 in 1953, did not file a regular report for the fourth quarter of 1954. Instead, the Chamber filed a statement to the effect that legal counsel had advised that such a report was unnecessary, but that "pending clarification" of the lobby law financial statements would be filed.

Third House of Congress

Some 222 lobbies reported spending more than $4 million to influence legislation in 1954. Spending not reported may have been even greater. For Congressional Quarterly's report on lobby spending for first half, 1955, see pp. 680-81.

TOP SPENDERS SHUFFLED

Changed reporting procedures probably account for some of the shifts that took place among the top spenders in 1954. Twenty-three organizations which reported spending more than $50,000 accounted for more than half of total spending reported. Their share was $2,139,380.48, compared to $2,511,518.75 for the 20 groups which topped $50,000 in 1953.

Leading the list was the National Milk Producers Federation, with $185,496.13. In 1953 the Federation reported spending $233,557.84, but ranked only third. That year the National Association of Electric Companies topped the list with $547,789.32. In 1954 the NAEC reported spending only $110,537.14 and tumbled to seventh place.

Five of 1953's biggest spenders dropped out of the "$50,000" club in 1954. They were the American Medical Association, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., American Tariff League, National Economic Council and Colorado River Association. AMA and Chamber officials were among those who told CQ that changed methods in reporting helped to account for the drop in their reported spending.

The 1954 rigid vs. flexible price supports battle -- repeated in the House in 1955 -- meant a busy and expensive year for the farm lobbies. Three leading farm groups -- National Milk Producers Federation, American Farm Bureau Federation, and National Farmers Union -- reported spending a total of $383,666.62.

Top Lobby Spenders

In 1954, 23 lobby groups each reported spending more than $50,000. Some declared that not all their spending was for legislative purposes. The 23, with reported 1953 spending for comparison:

Organization	1954	1953
Natl. Milk Producers Federation	$185,496.13	$233,557.84
Assoc. of American Railroads	185,379.55	235,727.73

National Association of Letter Carriers	50,339.09	---
Totals	$2,139,380.48	$2,231,740.73

But the three took different positions in the price supports battle, so much of this spending may have been at cross purposes.

LABOR GROUPS ACTIVE

Labor members of the "$50,000" club reported total spending of $505,337.09 for lobby activities in 1954. About one-third of this was spent by the National Federation of Post Office Clerks and National Association of Letter Carriers, which carried on an intensive but losing fight for a pay raise. Most of the balance was spent by the AFL and CIO, which lobbied on a wide variety of issues.

The reciprocal trade fight spotlighted a new lobby group in 1954. It was the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy, organized in 1953 to coordinate supporters of protective tariffs. The Committee reported spending $81,890.58 in 1954. It played an active role in 1955 during House and Senate consideration of legislation (HR 1) extending and amending the Trade Agreements Act. (See pp. 289ff.)

All in all, it appeared that total spending, as reported under the lobby law, was something short of the amount actually spent by all individuals and organizations attempting to influence legislation.

For one thing, it covered only those groups which had registered under the law. According to one official, "we frankly don't know how many lobbyists there may be today who, wittingly or unwittingly, fail to comply with the law's terms."

Among those who do register and report, there is clearly some confusion concerning what must be reported as lobby spending. Some groups report almost all of the money they spend, while others report only a fraction. Many do not file financial reports for all four quarters. (For comments, see following pages.)

For additional background information on the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act and various court decisions on it, see the following CQ Almanac references: Vol. X, 1954, p. 674; Vol. IX, 1953, p. 609; Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 248, 254; Vol. VI, 1950, p. 752.

For lobby spending in previous years, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 672-73; Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 578-80; Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 532-33.

Spending by Categories

Of organizations which filed 1954 reports under the lobby law, 225 included spending figures. A CQ division of these groups according to their principal fields of interest shows:

Reporting	Type of Group	Amount Spent
132	Business	$2,289,538.71
21	Labor	656,149.09
38	Citizens	615,582.61

225	TOTAL	$4,286,158.23

Yearly Totals

Total spending reported by groups under the Regulation of Lobbying Act for each full year since the law's enactment:

1947	$5,191,856

$2 Million Spent

FIRST-HALF OF 1955 LOBBY SPENDING

Lobbies reported spending $63,109.19 less during the first half of 1955 than they did over the corresponding period in 1954, according to a Congressional Quarterly tally of financial statements filed with Congress.

The CQ count showed that first-half lobby spending totaled $2,486,243.77 for 251 groups. CQ said 198 lobbies reported spending $2,549,352.96 during the first six months of 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 673.)

The top spender was the Transportation Association of America, which reported expenditures of $227,011.70. TAA said, however, that it was reporting spending "for support of all this organization's purposes and functions." It estimated that the law required no more than 1 percent of the $227,011.70 total to be reported as lobby spending. Harold F. Hammond, TAA executive vice president, Aug. 29 said, "Actually our total lobbying expenditures for the six-month period were under $2,000." He added TAA "next time would report only the amount we consider to be actual lobbying spending."

Other top spenders were the American Tariff League, National Association of Electric Companies, General Gas Committee, and CIO. (See box, page 681.)

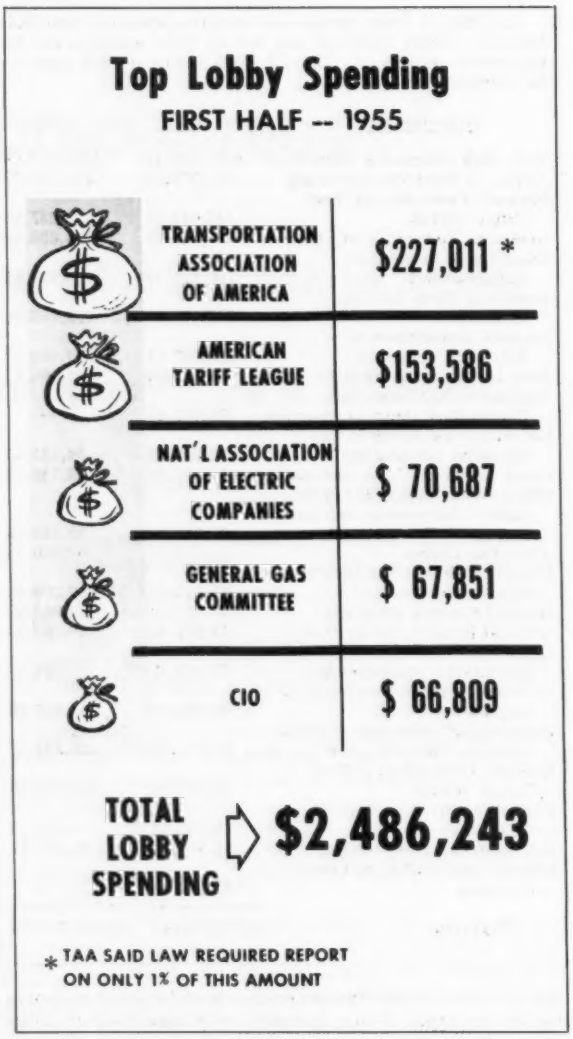
AUTHORITY FOR REPORTS

All groups registered under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act of 1946 are required to file quarterly accounts of their receipts and expenditures. Some groups, however, have changed their reporting techniques since the Supreme Court decision in U.S. vs. Harriss, et al, (347 U.S. 612) on June 7, 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 674.)

Many groups criticized the law, in statements attached to their official reports. Some said the law needed "clarification;" they pointed to "uncertainty as to coverage...and reporting obligations." Other groups attached reservations to their reports. Some groups said they filed "in good faith" while contending they were not subject to the law; others filed "under protest."

Another area of confusion concerned reporting methods. Some groups listed all expenditures, including salaries, administrative expenses, and overhead costs; others said only a small percentage of their total expenditures could be regarded as lobby spending.

Reporting Techniques



Representative statements indicating the confusion and uncertainty over coverage provisions of the lobby law:

American Hotel Association -- "Does not consider itself subject to the...Act; however, it will file reports pending clarification..."

American Medical Association -- "...unable to determine whether or not the Act is applicable...(but) is of the opinion that it is not. Because of the severe penalties incident to violation of the Act, even in good faith, the report is submitted under protest."

American Petroleum Institute -- "Pending an authoritative construction...by the courts, the Institute is filing this statement. By doing so, however, it does not admit that it is subject to...the Act or that it is required to file this statement."

American Tariff League -- "The League always had difficulty in fitting information on its receipts and expenditures into the categories set forth in the...'official' forms. Following the decision of the...Supreme Court...which, according to some legal opinion, makes the 'official' forms outmoded, the League has not reported on the 'official' forms. Furnishing this information, however, is not to be construed as any admission that the principal purpose of our expenditures and receipts was to influence legislation."

Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. -- "Legal Counsel has advised that...it does not appear that the functions and purposes of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S....are of such character as to require reporting...since there still exists uncertainty as to coverage...and reporting obligations thereunder, and pending possible clarification thereof, reports should be filed...."

Lake Carriers' Association -- "...no expenses were incurred in direct communication with Congress. The Association...accordingly asserts that it is not subject to the...Act..."

Confusion, Reservations

Some statements indicated the wide variety of methods employed by groups in reporting receipts and expenditures under the lobby law:

American Farm Bureau Federation -- "Since none of the officers or employees...devote all of their time and effort to legislative matters, we have (reported) such percentage of their salaries as relates to the percentage of time that they spend on legislative matters."

American Petroleum Institute -- "1.8 percent of the general dues and contributions received during the period of this report is (reported.)"

American Textile Machinery Association -- "None of the dues received by the Association is to be considered contributions for the specific purpose of attempting to influence legislation. It has been determined that of the total funds raised by the Association not more than 1.76 percent has been used for the purpose of making expenditures which might fall within the terms of the Act."

Committee on Foreign Trade Education, Inc. -- "It is impossible...to separate exactly these activities directly connected with legislative interests...; therefore, of the total receipts and expenditures, 50 percent have been allocated to legislative interests."

CIO -- "...figures contained in the...report are necessarily estimated and represent the closest approximation possible."

Emergency Conservation Committee -- "The expenditures listed...include all expenditures by or on behalf of the...Committee in carrying on its 'work' and not limited to expenditures 'in connection with legislative interest.'"

Engineers and Scientists of America -- "Receipts of the Engineers and Scientists of America consist of dues and assessments of which 4.09 percent have been expended ...for activities falling within the purview of the...Act."

Life Insurance Association of America -- "Of the total receipts (reported) 1.8 percent was used for federal lobbying activities."

National Association of Electric Companies -- "When the Association first registered...it reported all receipts and expenditures..." After the 1954 Supreme Court decision, "the Association began allocating its receipts and expenditures as between coverable and non-coverable items...."

Pacific American Tankship Association -- The amount reported as spent by the Association "represents the proportion estimated at about three percent of total dues...considered applicable to matters covered by the Act, if the Association were covered by the Act."

Transportation Association of America -- "It is estimated that if any of the expenditures of this organization are required to be reported under the Act...the amount thereof would not be in excess of 1 percent of the total expenditures..."

4,000 Since 1946

LOBBYIST REGISTRATIONS

Lobbyist recruits swelled the recorded ranks of the pressures brigade to more than 4,000 during the first session of the 84th Congress.

Registration figures compiled by Congressional Quarterly for 1955 showed 329 persons and organizations had registered under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act through Aug. 2, the date the first session adjourned.

The lobby law, enacted Aug. 2, 1946, requires all persons attempting to influence federal legislation to register with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate. In the nine years between the date the law became effective and the date the 1955 session adjourned, 4,013 persons and organizations registered as lobbyists.

MANY DUPLICATIONS

Many of the filings, however, were duplications. Of the 329 additions to the lobby rolls at adjournment time, for instance, only 221 were new registrants. The others had filed at least once prior to 1955. The breakdown of the 221: individuals, 178; law and public relations firms, 15; organizations, 28.

The one-year high was 731 in 1947, the first full year of the law's operation. The one-year low: 1952, when only 204 lobbyists registered.

BIGGEST LOBBY TEAM

The biggest 1955 team of lobbyists worked for the Cuban Sugar Growers Association and the National Cuban Sugar Mills Owners Association. Records showed 23 lobbyists were registered by the Washington law firm of Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly & Ball and its New York affiliate, Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly & Hamilton, on behalf of the sugar organizations.

Both Cuban sugar groups sought extension of the Sugar Act of 1948 with no change in the foreign and domestic sugar quotas. The quotas, in fact, were unchanged as of adjournment, but the House had passed a bill (HR 7030) to give domestic growers a bigger share of expanding U.S. consumption. (See p. 173ff.)

CONGRESSMEN WHO FILED

Eleven former congressmen were employed as lobbyists in 1955 to carry on "direct communication" with Congress. Registrations showed the ex-lawmakers and their sponsors included:

Ex-Rep. Howard M. Baldrige (R Neb., 1931-33), U.S. Cane Sugar Refiners Association, Washington, D.C.; Ex-Rep. James M. Barnes (D Ill., 1939-43), Reciprocal Inter-insurer's Federal Tax Committee, Washington, D.C.; ex-Rep. Robert A. Grant (R Ind., 1939-49), Ethanol institute, South Bend, Ind.; ex-Rep. William C. Lantaff (D Fla.,1951-54), U.S. Cuban Sugar Council, Washington, D.C.; ex-Rep. Carter Manasco (D Ala., 1941-49), Southern Pine Industry Committee, New Orleans, La.

Ex-Rep. Donald L. O'Toole (D N.Y., 1937-53), U.S. Cuban Sugar Council, Washington, D.C.; ex-Rep. J. Hardin Peterson (D Fla., 1933-50) for the West Coast Inland Navigation District, Bradentown, Fla.; Florida Citrus Mutual (no address listed); Tomoka Land Co., Sebring, Fla.; Howard L. Shannon, acting trustee for Color Legislative Fund, Lakeland, Fla.; and for Gene Salentine of Brooksville, Fla.; ex-Rep. Walter C. Ploeser (R Mo., 1941-49), Mississippi Valley Association, St. Louis, Mo.; ex-Rep. Frank L. Sundstrom (R N.J., 1943-49), Schenley Industries, Inc., N.Y.

Former Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D Ill., 1939-51) filed for the E. J. Albrecht Co. of Chicago, Ill. Ex-Sen. James P. Kem (R Mo., 1947-53) filed for the Tariff Committee of the Woven Felt Industry, c/o Albany Felt Co., Albany, N.Y.

Another filee bound to have wide Washington contacts was former Secretary of Army Kenneth C. Royall, who registered as a lobbyist for eight New York motion picture firms.

1954 ELECTION ANALYSIS

Democrats Making Inroads on GOP Vote in Midwest, New England; Republicans Gaining in South

The one-party state -- long the anomaly of a two-party nation -- is well on its way to extinction.

In progress for some time, the change gained further momentum in the 1954 election, according to an analysis by Congressional Quarterly. Upsets were scored by both parties, but in many cases reflected trends well established in earlier elections.

In Oregon, for example, Richard L. Neuberger became the state's first Democratic Senator in 40 years, while Mrs. Edith Green, who was elected Representative from the Third District by 9,600 votes, became the state's first Democratic House member in a decade. But the Democratic share of the vote in this Republican stronghold had been increasing in House races in the past five elections, particularly in the Second and Third Districts.

Democrats are also making inroads in normally Republican northern New England and in the Midwest, traditional GOP preserve. For their part, Republicans are making significant gains in the Democratic South. The result is close contests in areas once regarded as safely "one-party."

MAINE SHOWS TREND

Maine upset tradition by electing a Democratic governor, Edmund Muskie, by a margin of 22,400 votes. Maine's three House seats remained in GOP hands, but in the past five elections the Democratic share of the vote had increased almost 15 percent in each of the three Districts. Rep. Robert Hale won re-election in the First District by only 3,800 votes. Both the First and Second Districts are now classed as marginal.

In neighboring New Hampshire, Republican Chester E. Merrow, a six-termer from the First District, won re-election by only 400 votes. Next door in Vermont, long-time GOP stronghold, Republicans were pressed hard for the second time in two years to keep a Democrat out of the governorship.

Democrats also made substantial gains at GOP expense in the Republican heartland -- the Midwest. The GOP's share of the 1954 vote in House contests was less than its share in 1952 and 1950 in the following states: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. It was also down in Missouri, which has a Democratic background.

The Democrats' share of Michigan's vote, for example, had increased in almost all of the state's 18 Congressional districts over the past 10 years. The Democrats unseated GOP incumbents in two of these districts, and elected Sen. Patrick V. McNamara by a 39,000 vote margin, in 1954.

A similar trend shows itself in Minnesota and Wisconsin. In 1954, Democrats retired GOP incumbents Harold C. Hagen in Minnesota's Ninth District and Charles J. Kersten in Wisconsin's Fifth. In addition, Democrat Orville Freeman ousted Minnesota's Republican Governor by 68,000 votes. In Wisconsin, GOP Governor Walter J. Kohler, who won re-election in 1952 with 62.6 percent of the vote, was re-elected, but only by 51.5 percent of the vote.

Republican gains in the Democratic South have not been so extensive. Handicapped by a lack of "grass roots" machinery, the GOP has concentrated on selected House races and has made real progress in Virginia, Florida, North Carolina, and Texas. Virginia in particular is moving rapidly toward two-party status.

GOP'S VIRGINIA GAINS

In 1952, President Eisenhower carried eight of Virginia's 10 districts -- four of them by more than 60 percent of the vote -- and swept three GOP Congressmen into office, the first GOP newcomers to be elected since 1928. One of them, William C. Wampler (Ninth), lost his seat to a Democrat in 1954 by 1,000 votes, but Richard H. Poff (Sixth) and Joel T. Broyhill (10th) won re-election by higher percentages, despite the GOP's national trend downward.

Poff increased his margin from 51.5 to 62.3 percent, or about the same edge that President Eisenhower won in the Sixth in 1952. Moreover, the GOP share of the Virginia vote in House contests jumped from 24.6 percent in 1950 to 40 percent in 1954, and Republicans made a strong showing in the 1953 gubernatorial contest.

In Florida, President Eisenhower carried five of eight districts in 1952, three of them by more than 60 percent of the vote. The GOP vote in House races doubled from 1950, and in 1954 William C. Cramer (First District) became the first Republican Congressman from Florida since the Civil War.

In Texas, where Democratic Gov. Allan Shivers crossed party lines to help Mr. Eisenhower carry 14 of the state's 21 Congressional districts in 1952, the GOP contested only five seats in 1954. Bruce Alger won in the Fifth, with 52.9 percent of the vote, while in two other districts Republican nominees won at least one-third of the total vote.

In North Carolina, Mr. Eisenhower won 46.1 percent of the vote in 1952, and carried four of the state's 12 districts. Republican Charles R. Jonas was elected in the 10th by 57.4 percent, a margin which he retained in 1954. In the Ninth District, the GOP vote averaged 48 percent in the past two elections.

CONGRESSIONAL PROSPECTS

No matter which party captures the White House in 1956, Democrats seem likely to retain control of the Senate.

Republican chances of winning the House, however, may hinge on President Eisenhower's plans, according to an analysis of election statistics by Congressional Quarterly.

It's true that Democrats barely gained control of the Senate in 1954, taking three of five contests by less than 4,000 votes each. But they scored a net gain of two seats against odds, as 22 of the seats at stake were held by Democrats and only 16 were occupied by Republicans.

In 1956, the shoe will be on the other foot. Of 33 seats to be filled, 17 are now held by Republicans, only 16 by Democrats. Moreover, nine of the latter are in the South where Democrats almost invariably win statewide contests.

It is this fact that prompted Arizona's Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, to report Feb. 20 that the odds were "heavily stacked" against the GOP in 1956.

WORSE IN 1958

Democrats are almost certain to win Senate seats in Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina (2), Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Florida. Other Democratic incumbents up in 1956 include Carl Hayden (Ariz.), Earle C. Clements (Ky.), Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (Mo.), Herbert H. Lehman (N.Y.), Alan Bible (Nev.), and Warren G. Magnuson (Wash.). Bible said Nov. 28 he would not seek re-election. Most of them are well entrenched, but Sen. Wayne Morse (Ore.), who was elected in 1950 as a Republican but will run in 1956 as a Democrat, faces a battle royal to retain his seat.

Republicans are fairly certain to retain seats in Vermont, Kansas, South Dakota, North Dakota, and New Hampshire. Less solid are 12 other GOP seats, in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, and California. Seats now held by Prescott Bush (Conn.), John Marshall Butler (Md.) and George H. Bender (Ohio) appear to be in the most danger, judging by recent elections. Democratic gains in Pennsylvania and Indiana, together with GOP intra-party feuding, cast a shadow over the seats now held by James H. Duff (Pa.) and Homer E. Capehart (Ind.).

If the GOP fails to win control of the Senate in 1956, it will face even greater odds in 1958. That year there will be 20 Republican seats at stake and only 12 Democratic seats, six of which are in southern or border states which have elected only Democrats in recent years.

GOP'S HOUSE HOPES

In the House, the GOP's hopes ride with President Eisenhower. In the 1952 Eisenhower landslide, the Party won the House by a slim margin (221 seats) but the GOP vote in House races showed an increase over 1950 percentages in 37 states. Moreover, there were no Republican candidates in 26 of the 297 Congressional districts carried by the President. But in 343 districts in which there were major party contests in 1952, Republicans polled 27,247,682 votes as compared with 23,746,532 for the Democrats.

In 1954, without President Eisenhower on the ticket, the GOP vote in House contests dropped in 40 states, as compared with 1952, and in 27 states as compared with 1950. Democrats made a net gain of 17 seats to take over House control with 230 members. But Republicans held more seats than might have been expected in view of substantial Democratic gains in local and state contests.

In Pennsylvania, for example, Democrats elected Gov. George Leader by 279,200 votes, but the Democratic plurality in House races was only 47,400. Democrats picked up three GOP seats, but two were won by only 2,500 votes each.

REPUBLICAN HANDICAP

One handicap facing the GOP in 1956 is the fact that it must defend twice as many "doubtful" districts as the Democrats. In 1954, Republicans won 63 districts by less than 55 percent of the vote, as against 31 such districts won by Democrats. After the 1952 election, the ratio of "five percent" seats was 45 Democrats, 40 Republicans.

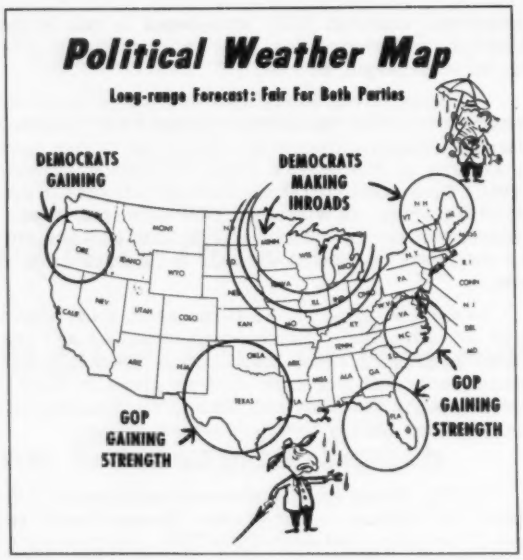
In 1954 House races outside the South, Republicans led Democrats by only 164,686 votes, 19,440,611 to 19,275,925. The fall-off in GOP percentages was particularly noticeable in 11 midwestern states.

At the same time, the GOP is making solid if limited gains in the Democratic South. Republicans won two new southern seats, in Texas and Florida, in 1954, despite an unusually heavy Democratic vote. The GOP also retained three of four southern seats won in 1952.

GRASS ROOTS OUTLOOK

As the two major parties scan the horizon for portents of 1956, the "grass roots" look particularly green to Democrats.

Reason is that in 1954 Democrats made important gains in contests for municipal, county and state offices. The trend continued in 1955, when Democrats gained 43 mayoralties in Indiana, showed increased strength in Philadelphia, Connecticut, upstate New York and New Jersey.



According to Stephen A. Mitchell, former Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, the Party's 1954 victory was "like an iceberg, because we picked up so much strength at the grass roots" which did not show up in races for the Senate and House. A Committee survey of the 1954 election claimed that in a number of important counties "the Democratic party swept all or virtually all offices with the greatest majorities since the 1930's."

The survey also reported substantial Democratic gains in 1954 in three or more counties in each of the following states: Colorado, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, New Mexico, Oregon, and Pennsylvania. But Democrats also suffered losses in at least three counties--Pinellas County, Fla., Gallatin County, Ill., and Salt Lake County, Utah.

NET GAIN: 500 SEATS

Big Democratic gains were made in state legislatures which involve a total of 7,531 seats. Democrats gained a total of 500 seats in 1954, 397 in lower chambers, 103 in upper chambers, although only about one-half of the state senate seats were at stake.

Democrats picked up a total of 42 seats in Connecticut, 25 in Missouri, 24 in New Mexico. 22 each in Indiana and South Dakota, 21 in Arizona, and 20 each in Michigan and Montana. Other states in which Democrats gained 15 or more seats: Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, and Wyoming.

Moreover, Democrats captured control of lower chambers in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Missouri, New Mexico, Montana, and Washington; of the senate in Connecticut; and of both chambers in Delaware.

Republican gains in 1954 were severely limited -- a total of five seats. The GOP picked up one state senate seat each in Nevada, Oklahoma, and Utah, and one house seat each in Tennessee and Georgia.

DIVIDED CONTROL

The parties head into the 1956 campaign with control of the state legislatures almost evenly divided. Republicans control both chambers in 20 states, Democrats in 19. There is divided control in seven states. Nebraska and Minnesota have non-partisan legislatures.

Most publicized of the 1954 Democratic gains were in the governorship contests. Of 34 races, Democrats won 19. They replaced Republican governors in eight states -- Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Maine, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, and Pennsylvania. In three other states -- Nevada, Vermont, and Wyoming -- Democrats came close to winning.

Of seven states with 20 or more electoral votes, Democrats now hold the governorships in five -- New York (45), Pennsylvania (32), Ohio (25), Texas (24) and Michigan (20). Those held by the GOP are in California (32), where Gov. Goodwin J. Knight won re-election, and in Illinois (27), where there was no contest in 1954.

Altogether, Democrats hold governorships in 27 states with 347 electoral votes, while Republicans occupy the chair in 21 states with 184 electoral votes. This is the statistic which prompted the Republican National Committee to say: "Perhaps the most serious aspect of the 1954 elections...was the Republican loss in governorships."

SENATE ELECTION PERCENTAGES -- 1950-54

Percentage of Eisenhower Vote by States, 1952

This exclusive Congressional Quarterly chart shows the election pattern for Senate seats for the 82nd, 83rd and 84th Congresses, and also the percentage of the vote which President Eisenhower chalked up in each state in 1952. States consistently won by over 60 per cent of the total vote seldom change politically. States in the 55 to 60 per cent bracket are key states, but most of them stay in the same party. States which normally elect Senators by less than 55 per cent of the vote are usually doubtful and can go either way. Figures are listed for each winning candidate in the appropriate year column opposite his name in accordance with the key below.

This exclusive Congressional Quarterly chart shows the election patterns for the 82nd, 83rd and 84th Congresses, and also the percentages of the vote which President Eisenhower chalked up in each Congressional district in 1952. Districts consistently won by over 60 percent of the total vote seldom change politically. Districts in the 55 to 60 percent bracket are key districts, but most of them stay in the same party. Districts which normally elect Representatives by less than 55 percent of the total vote are usually doubtful and can go either way. Figures under the appropriate year columns pertain to winning candidate in each election, not necessarily to present holder of seat.

For National Conventions . . .

VOTERS HAVE LITTLE VOICE IN PICKING DELEGATES

Only a minority of the states will give rank-and-file voters a direct voice in nominating the 1956 Republican and Democratic Presidential standard bearers, a Congressional Quarterly survey shows.

Delegates to the national conventions will choose the nominees. The 48 states will send 96 delegations -- one Republican and one Democratic slate each. In addition, territories and other areas will be represented.

Who elects the delegates?

Twenty-three of the 96 state delegations will be elected through party primaries. Another 59 state parties will elect delegates at conventions on the state or district level. Party committees will pick five slates of delegates. Four state parties will choose some delegates by primary, some by convention; four others will use a primary-party committee combination. Alabama Republicans polled a big enough vote in 1952 to become eligible to hold a primary -- instead of a convention -- in 1956, if they wish. Alabama Democrats also have a choice, but usually use the primary.

PRIMARY SEASON

Presidential primaries or delegate elections will be held in 19 states, with New Hampshire leading off March 13, 1956. The season will close June 5. May 8 and June 5 will be the busiest days, with four primaries scheduled.

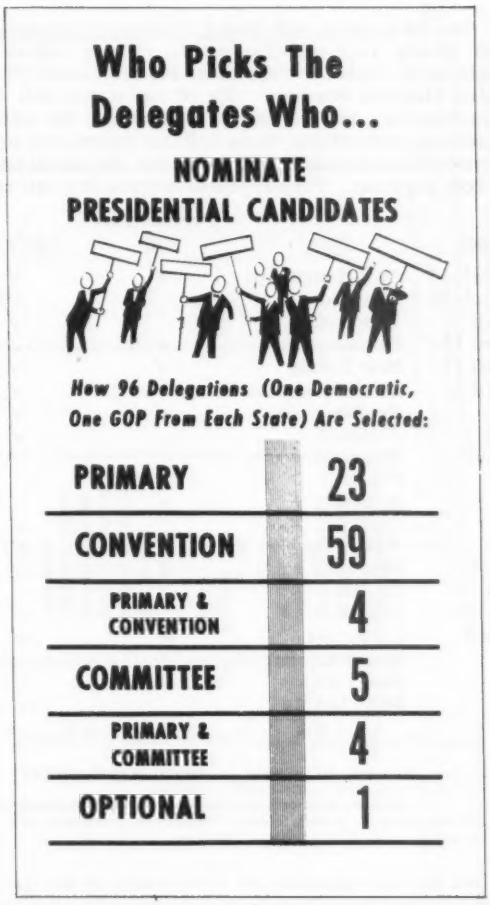
Besides electing delegates, voters in some primaries have the chance to express their preference directly on Presidential hopefuls. In 10 states, primaries are used for both purposes, in six only for election of delegates, and in three only for a Presidential preferential poll.

Voters in only seven states can consistently control their delegates to the national conventions. In California, Indiana, Montana, and Nebraska, delegates are bound by law to support the candidate who wins the preferential primary. Minnesota and Ohio hold no preferential primaries, but would-be delegates must run pledged to a particular candidate, and the law holds them to their pledge.

Maryland's national delegates must support the candidate endorsed by the state convention. Endorsement, in turn, is based on a county-unit vote of pledged delegates to the state convention.

NO PLEDGE IS PERMANENT

In Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, and Wisconsin, delegates are bound to support a particular candidate only if they choose to run as pledged delegates.



Arkansas, North Dakota, and Tennessee allow party rules to govern the question of binding delegates.

In the other 34 states -- some of which hold preferential primaries -- delegates are free to support any candidate they want. They may, however, announce their preference and stick to it voluntarily. The choice of the rank-and-file has moral, but not legal force.

No pledge is permanent. Delegates may be released after the convention's first ballot or at some later point. Traditionally, all delegates swing behind the winning candidate to make the final vote unanimous.

Presidential hopefuls employ a variety of strategems to win nomination. Some, like Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio) in 1952, fight hard to win primaries.

Adlai E. Stevenson and General Eisenhower, on the other hand, devoted no open, personal effort to winning primaries in 1952. Mr. Eisenhower won some, anyway. Instead, their backers concentrated on rounding up support in state committees and conventions, and among political leaders. Both the men who stood aloof carried the conventions.

Fact Sheet

19 STATES TO HOLD PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES

Nineteen states will hold Presidential primaries in 1956, giving rank-and-file voters varying degrees of weight in the choice of Republican and Democratic Presidential standard bearers. Six of the states will hold primaries only for election of delegates to the national nominating conventions; three only for expression of preference among Presidential candidates; the remaining 10 for both purposes. Primary dates in chronological order:

* Elects all except three, at-large, who are chosen in convention.

‡ Florida splits its primary, holding Presidential preferential poll on different date than election of delegates.

Indiana and Montana are newcomers to the list of states that will hold Presidential preferential primaries in 1956. They enacted preferential primary laws in 1953. Nevada also enacted a preferential primary law in 1953, but repealed it March 26, 1955. Arkansas has a preferential primary law -- enacted in 1939 -- on the books, but it never has been used.

States which require a Presidential candidate's consent before his name may be used in the preferential primary or before a delegate may run pledged to him:

California, Indiana, Maryland, Nebraska, Ohio, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin.

States which permit use of a candidate's name on the preferential primary ballot or by a pledged delegate without the candidate's consent:

Alabama, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania. However, the candidate may demand withdrawal of his name in Minnesota, New Hampshire, and New Jersey.

One or both parties in 16 states use primary elections to choose delegates to national nominating conventions. (See "Primary Dates," above.)

In three of these states, voters vote for slates of delegates: California, Minnesota, South Dakota.

In 10 states, voters vote for individual delegates: Alabama, Florida, Illinois, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, West Virginia.

In three states, voters may vote either for slates or for individuals: Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin.

ELECTION LAW CHANGES

Several states changed their election laws to permit certification of Presidential nominees despite the late national nominating conventions scheduled for 1956 -- Democrats at Chicago, Aug. 13, and Republicans at San Francisco, Aug. 20. The changes:

CONNECTICUT -- List of nominees may be sent to town clerks for mailing to absentee voters as late as Sept. 1, instead of Aug. 15.

IOWA -- Certification 55 days before general election, instead of 70 days.

MASSACHUSETTS -- Certification by second Tuesday in September, instead of 14 weeks before election.

OHIO -- Certification 70 days before election, instead of 75 days.

SOUTH DAKOTA -- Certification within seven days after nomination, instead of 85 to 89 days before election.

WEST VIRGINIA -- Delivery of absentee ballots between July 25 and Aug. 10, except that printing and delivery shall be delayed until certification of Presidential nominees.

1952 WINNERS

Presidential candidates who won primaries in 1952 are listed below. In some states, they won pledged delegates to the national conventions; in others, the voters merely went on record for a particular candidate without binding their delegates. Winners of delegate contests in some cases won the votes of the full slate, in some cases only a majority -- with runners-up getting the balance. Ohio's Democratic delegation was split evenly -- 27 votes for Kefauver, 27 for Buckley. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 485-6.)

HOW STATES SELECT DELEGATES TO PRESIDENTIAL CONVENTIONS

In 1956, 23 of the 96 state political parties (one Democratic, one Republican Party in each state) will choose their delegates to national Presidential nominating conventions by primary election. Fifty-nine will choose their delegates at state and/or district conventions. Four will choose some delegates by primary, some by convention. In five parties, delegates will be chosen by state party committees. Four will choose some delegates by primary, some by party committees. Alabama Republicans will have their choice between primary and convention. A check mark (✓) indicates the set-up in each state party.

States differ on whether or not delegates are bound to support a particular Presidential candidate at national conventions. Symbols in the last column indicate the set-up in each state. The key is shown in the adjoining column.

B -- Seven states bind their delegates by law. They must support the candidate who wins the state's preferential primary (California, Indiana, Montana, Nebraska), the candidate endorsed by the state convention (Maryland), or the candidate whom the delegate pledged to support (Minnesota, Ohio). Delegates from Minnesota and Ohio must run pledged.

N -- In 34 states, delegates are not bound by law to any candidate.

B/N -- In four states, delegates have a choice between running as bound or not bound to a particular candidate.

P -- Three states allow party rules to determine whether or not delegates shall be bound.

* Alabama gives parties choice between primary and convention when they poll a sizable vote in the previous election. Democrats usually use the primary. Republicans, who had to use the convention in 1952, will be eligible for a primary in 1956.

† District delegates only elected by primary. At-large delegates elected by state convention in Illinois, by state party committees in New York and Pennsylvania.

‡ Delegates to Maryland state convention elected by primary. They are bound to vote by county units at state convention for Presidential candidate who wins preferential primary. State convention elects delegates to national convention. All delegates are bound to support candidate who wins state convention's endorsement. If no Presidential candidate runs in preferential primary, state convention may send uninstructed delegation to national convention.

CAMPAIGN SPENDING

84th Congress Cost $13.7 Million to Elect;

Republicans Spent More Than Democrats

The 84th Congress, which appropriated many billions of dollars in 1955, cost a mere $13.7 million to elect in 1954.

That, at least, was the sum of spending reported to Congress by 1,054 candidates and political committees engaged in the Nov. 2, 1954 election. The sum was tabulated by Congressional Quarterly in a study of all final reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House.

As much or more spending, most observers agreed, either was not reported or was reported only to state authorities. On the basis of spending reported to Congress, however, the 1954 Congressional election was the most expensive since 1948, when CQ first tabulated the returns.

Generally, spending for Senate and House contests falls off in Presidential election years, when the parties concentrate on capturing the White House. Thus, in 1952, when $17.5 million was reported spent on the Presidential contest, only $5.6 million was reported for Congressional races. In 1950, last previous mid-term election year, reports to Congress came to $10.9 million.

GOP HIGH

Republican candidates and committees reported almost twice as much 1954 spending as Democrats -- $7,259,767 against $3,798,413. However, Democratic candidates were the beneficiaries of most of the $2,057,613 spent by 41 labor committees. Another $546,621 was reported by independent groups and candidates for an overall total of $13,662,414.

Most of the increase from $10.9 million in 1950 to $13.7 million in 1954 represented additional Republican spending. In 1950, GOP candidates and committees reported a total of $4.7 million, Democrats $4.2 million and labor $1.6 million.

All of these figures, of course, are only totals of all spending reported to Congress. While some duplication is involved, it is more than offset by spending not reported to Congress. Under federal law, costs of primary campaigns need not be reported. Nor does the law require reports from political committees operating solely within one state, although they may be required to report under state law. Closing of these loopholes in the federal law was recommended by a Senate committee in 1955. (See p. 375.)

RECORD SUM SPENT TO ELECT CONGRESS

Candidates and others report spending $13.7 million in 1954 in campaigns for 84th Congress. And a lot more went unreported, says Congressional Quarterly, only authority to tabulate all spending reports to Congress. For this report, see pages 722-756.

Costly Races

More than $50,000 was spent in each of five Senate races in 1954, according to reports filed with Congress by candidates.

These reports point to the Rhode Island contest between Sen. Theodore Francis Green (D) and Walter I. Sundlun (R) as the most expensive. Sundlun reported that he and two committees spent $105,255.59 for both primary and general elections, while Green, who won re-election, reported spending $13,638.30.

The four other contests, winners listed first:

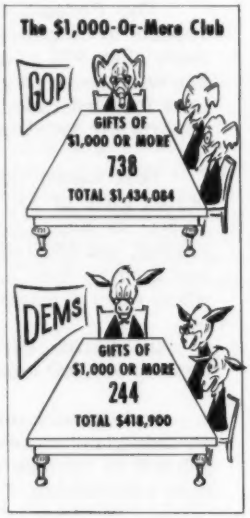
Illinois -- Paul H. Douglas (D), $38,901.50; Joseph T. Meek (R), $27,725.25. Total -- $66,626.75.

New Jersey -- Clifford P. Case (R), $39,180.52; Charles R. Howell (D), $24,971.47. Total -- $64,151.99.



Michigan -- Pat McNamara (D), $37,444.49; Homer Ferguson (R), $21,079.48. Total -- $58,523.97.

These sums, taken from the reports to Congress of the candidates themselves, do not always tell the whole story. Actual totals probably were greater than those listed for these and other races, mainly because federal law does not require reports from committees operating solely in one state.

OREGON RACE

In the Oregon race, for example, Neuberger reported to Congress for himself and three committees working in his behalf; former Sen. Cordon said he spent nothing but added that the "Cordon for U.S. Senator Committee" filed a report in Oregon, in compliance with state law.

Checking a report by Oregon's Secretary of State, CQ found that it showed total spending in Cordon's behalf, by 30 committees and four individuals, of $141,264.01. Neuberger's total from 10 committees and four individuals, was $87,652.64. Thus the Oregon contest cost at least $228,000, or almost twice as much as was reported to Congress for any Senate race.

At the other end of the scale, four Southern Democrats -- Sens. Richard B. Russell (Ga.), Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (La.), James O. Eastland (Miss.) and Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) -- reported no expenditures in their campaigns for re-election. Sens. John J. Sparkman (Ala.) and Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (N.C.) reported $100 each; W. Kerr Scott (N.C.), $50, and John L. McClellan (Ark.) $37.50.

All of these men were in reality elected in primaries, and the federal law does not require candidates to report primary spending. Yet at least three of them -- Ellender, Sparkman and McClellan -- encountered stiff primary opposition.

HOUSE RACES

Similar gaps occur in reports to Congress on House contests. The five apparently most expensive, with winners first:

N.Y. 6th Dist. -- Lester Holtzman (D), $4,942.77; Seymour Halpern (R), $33,653.47. Total -- $38,596.24.

Md. 5th -- Richard E. Lankford (D), $13,031.51; Frank Small, Jr. (R), $21,558.03. Total -- $34,589.54.

Calif. 13th -- Charles M. Teague (R), $27,577.86; Timothy O'Reilly (D), $6,649.82. Total -- $34,227.68.

Wash. 1st -- Thomas M. Pelly (R), $15,123.63; Hugh B. Mitchell (D), $16,280.58. Total -- $31,404.21.

Wash. At Large -- Don Magnuson (D), $12,259.40; Al Canwell (R), $17,436.97. Total -- $29,696.37.

In addition to candidates' reports, however, CQ examined reports of 47 special committees working in behalf of various House candidates. It developed that the most expensive House race, as reported to Congress both by candidates and their committees, was in the Ninth District of Ohio. There the only independent Member of the House, Frazier Reams, lost his seat to Democrat Thomas L. Ashley. Total spending reported for Reams, Ashley and Republican contender Irving C. Reynolds was $42,639.42.

But this was certainly not the largest sum actually spent for a House race. While 47 committees did file reports (although not required by federal law), many others did not. In the Third District of Oregon, for example, Mrs. Edith Green (D), who defeated Thomas L. McCall (R), reported spending $712.73. McCall reported nothing, but the "McCall for Congress Committee" reported $27,366.66. What was not reported to Congress but was reported to the Oregon Secretary of State, was $22,782.01 spent by the "Green for Congress Committee." Total for the contest, as carried in the Oregon report, was $51,596.40.

Large Contributors

Mounting campaign costs have led candidates for Congress to look with special fondness on large contributors, provided they can find them. In this search, Republicans appear to be more than three times as successful as Democrats. This fact emerges from Congressional Quarterly's analysis of all reports filed with Congress by candidates and committees engaged in the 1954 Congressional campaign.

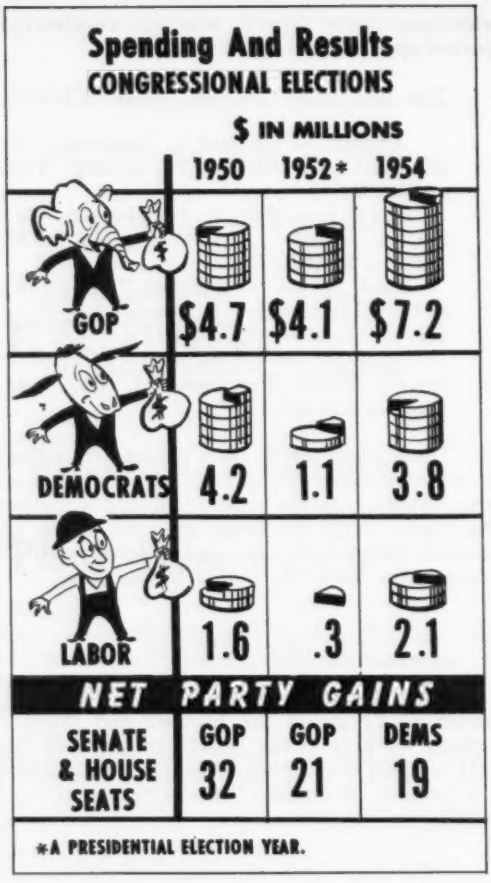
Of 96 political committees which reported to Congress, 27 listed among their receipts contributions totaling $1,000 or more from one or more individuals.

Summarized, these reports show that Republican groups took in $1,434,084.30 from 738 contributions, while Democratic groups collected $418,900 from 244 contributions of $1,000 or more.

In practice, there is no limit to the amount an individual may contribute to political campaigns. The Hatch Political Activities Act imposes a limit of $5,000, but this is interpreted to govern only the amount that may be given to one candidate or one committee. Moreover, wealthy families may distribute their contributions among various members of the family.

FAMILIAR NAMES



According to the committee reports studied by CQ, 10 members of the Rockefeller family gave an aggregate of $66,000 to various Republican campaign groups.

Fourteen persons from Delaware bearing the name of duPont gave $51,500 to GOP groups. Other large GOP contributors included the Mellons of Pittsburgh ($40,000), the Pews of Philadelphia ($25,000), and the Whitneys of New York ($30,100).

Also prominent among GOP contributors were: Hollywood producers Samuel Goldwyn and Louis B. Mayer ($1,000 each); hotelman Conrad N. Hilton ($3,000); Ambassadors Clare Booth Luce ($2,500) and C. Douglas Dillon ($9,000); auto manufacturer Henry Ford, II ($3,000); publisher Henry R. Luce ($7,000); railroadman Robert R. Young ($3,000); movie executive Eric Johnston ($2,500).

Prominent Democratic contributors included: Adlai E. Stevenson ($2,500); N.Y. Gov. Averell Harriman ($2,500 -- his brother, E. Roland Harriman, gave $10,000 to GOP groups); Sens. Theodore Francis Green (R.I. -- $1,000), Olin D. Johnston (S.C. -- $1,000), Robert S. Kerr (Okla. -- $1,000), Herbert H. Lehman (N.Y. -- $3,500), John L. McClellan (Ark. -- $2,250), Stuart Symington (Mo. -- $1,000); and ex-Sen. Millard E. Tydings (Md. -- $2,500).

Among other contributors to the Democrats were: oilman Edwin W. Pauley and his wife ($5,000); former Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan ($3,500); Mrs. Albert D. Lasker ($6,000); ballplayer Stanley Musial ($1,000) and his St. Louis Cardinals' boss, "Gus" Busch ($2,500); and former national committee chairman Frank McKinney ($4,000).

INDIVIDUALS REPORT

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act requires reports to Congress from individuals who contribute more than $50 to candidates in two or more states, but no reports on gifts to committees are required. Only four individuals, all from Houston, Texas, filed reports for 1954 under this provision.

Best known was oilman H. R. Cullen, who reported gifts of $3,500 to three candidates. He gave $2,500 to Rep. Leo E. Allen (R Ill.), who was re-elected, and $500 each to Robert L. Jones (R Maine) and former Rep. Laurie C. Battle (D Ala.), both of whom were defeated in Senatorial primaries.

In addition, two GOP committees reported gifts totaling $16,000 from the Cullen family.

In 1952, according to CQ records, Cullen filed an individual report showing contributions totaling $53,000 to various candidates of both parties or to their committees.

HIGH COST OF CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGNING

This is Congressional Quarterly's biennial report on what it costs to elect Congress -- this time the 84th Congress, elected on Nov. 2, 1954. The report is based on an analysis of more than 1,000 individual and committee reports filed, pursuant to federal law, with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House.

Political Committee Spending and Receipts begin on p. 729; Senate Campaign Spending on p. 731; Receipts and Spending of House Candidates on p. 736; Campaign Donations of $1,000 or More on p. 748.

Record Spending Reported

Total spending reported in 1954 topped $13.6 million, and was the largest amount reported for a Congressional election since 1948, when CQ first tabulated campaign spending. (For a summary of 1954 expenditures, see adjoining column.)

In 1950, last previous mid-term election year, total spending of $10.9 million was reported. In 1952, when $17.5 million was reported spent on the Presidential race, spending for Congressional contests was only $5.6 million. (For details of 1950 and 1952 spending, see CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 40 ff., and Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 40 ff.)

Most of the $2.7 million increase in reported spending between 1950 and 1954 was by Republicans. This is reflected in the following table. Most spending by labor groups was in behalf of Democrats.

	1950	1952*	1954
Republicans	$4,698,955	$4,074,890	$ 7,259,767
Democrats	4,191,260	1,141,628	3,798,413
Labor	1,618,623	352,117	2,057,613
Others	392,625	16,053	546,621
TOTAL	$10,901,463	$5,584,688	$13,662,414

 Does not include $17,479,697 reported spent in the Presidential contest.*

Included in the foregoing totals is an undetermined amount of duplication between the spending reported by political committees and that reported by candidates. It comes about in this fashion: The Republican and Democratic National Committees may have transferred certain sums to their respective Senatorial and Congressional Campaign Committees, which in turn distributed the funds to candidates and/or committees working in their behalf. Thus a given sum might be listed as an expenditure in two or more reports, so addition of the totals would entail some duplication.

Such duplication, however, appears to be more than offset by serious omissions in the amount of spending that is reported. There are two major gaps:

1. Federal law does not require reports of spending in connection with primary elections. Yet primaries in many states are hotly fought and expensive contests, and in the South may be the only contests. In 1954, for example, several Southern Democrats seeking re-election were involved in major primary battles, but faced little or no opposition in the general election. So they reported little or no spending.

2. Federal law does not require reports from political committees, unless they operate in more than one state or are branches of national groups. Thus state and county central committees, which may spend large sums of money in Congressional races, need not report to Congress, although they may be required to file reports within their own states. The same applies to special committees organized to support a single candidate. How much other spending -- by a candidate's friends and business associates, for example -- goes unreported is impossible to estimate.

On balance, therefore, the more than $13.6 million reported to Congress is probably well below what was actually spent to influence the 1954 Congressional elections.

Top Senate Races

On the basis of reports filed by the candidates themselves, the following five Senatorial contests involved expenditures of more than $50,000 each. Winning candidates are listed first.

Theodore F. Green (D R.I.)	$ 13,638.30
Walter I. Sundlun (R R.I.) (includes primary expenses and two committee reports)	105,255.59
Total	$118,893.89
Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) (includes 3 committee reports)	$ 84,004.13
Guy Cordon (R Ore.) (reported no expenses, but said committee filed in Oregon)	---------
Total	$ 84,004.13
Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) (includes some primary costs)	$ 38,901.50
Joseph T. Meek (R Ill.) (includes some primary costs)	27,725.25
Total	$ 66,626.75
Clifford P. Case (R N.J.)	$ 39,180.52
Charles R. Howell (D N.J.)	24,971.47
Total	$ 64,151.99
Pat McNamara (D Mich.) (all spent by committee)	$ 37,444.49
Homer Ferguson (R Mich.)	21,079.48
Total	$ 58,523.97

The reports of candidates do not tell the whole story, however. Sen. Douglas, for example, reported receipts, as well as expenses, of $38,901.50. Yet the report filed by the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee listed contributions to Douglas and to committees working in his behalf totaling $24,487, and 11 labor committees listed similar contributions totaling $35,500, the largest sum reported spent by labor in any one race in 1954. Thus, the DSCC and 11 labor groups together reported almost $60,000 in contributions to the Douglas campaign, only a part of which was recorded by Douglas among his personal receipts.

Similarly, the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee reported spending $11,500 on the campaign of Douglas' opponent, Joseph T. Meek. Only $5,000 of this was listed by Meek among his receipts of $1,000 or more. (For other examples, see box, adjoining column.)

CQ did not undertake to study all reports filed in the various states. But because former Sen. Cordon was the only candidate in the five seemingly most expensive races who did not report spending in his behalf to Congress, CQ obtained the Biennial Report of Oregon's Secretary of State.

According to this report, a total of 30 committees and groups, together with four individuals, spent a total of $141,264.01 in behalf of Cordon's candidacy. For Neuberger, 10 committees and four individuals (including Neuberger himself, who reported spending $1,100) spent a total of $87,652.64. Neuberger's own report to Congress, of course, listed only his own expenses and those of three committees, totaling $84,000.

In sum, then, almost $228,000 was reported spent in the Cordon-Neuberger contest. This was almost twice the amount apparently spent in the Rhode Island race, the most expensive on the basis of candidates' reports to Congress. Whether the Oregon contest was, in fact, the most expensive is impossible to say.

At the other end of the scale were several Southern Democrats, mostly incumbents seeking re-election, who reported little or no spending. Sens. Richard B. Russell (Ga.), Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (La.), James O. Eastland (Miss.) and Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) reported no expenditures. Sens. John J. Sparkman (Ala.) and Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (N.C.) reported $100 each; W. Kerr Scott (N.C.) $50, and John L. McClellan (Ark.) $37.50. Ellender, Sparkman and McClellan encountered stiff opposition in the primaries, but were not required to report primary spending. Sparkman and Scott received substantial labor support, presumably in the primaries.

Conflicting Reports

One source of confusion in analyzing campaign spending is illustrated by a comparison of reports relating to the campaigns of certain Democratic Senatorial candidates who were supported heavily by labor. The list is confined to Democrats because they were the beneficiaries of most spending by labor groups. Figures, rounded to the nearest dollar, are as follows:

Col. 1 Total spending reported by candidate.
Col. 2 Total contributions to candidate's campaign by Democratic Senate Campaign Committee.
Col. 3 Total contributions to candidate's campaign by 11 labor committees.

Top House Races

On the basis of reports filed by candidates themselves, the following 10 House contests were the most expensive. Names of winners appear first.

District	Contestants		Total
6th N.Y.	Holtzman (D) $ 4,942.77	vs. Halpern (R) $33,653.47	$38,596.24
5th Md.	Lankford (D) $13,031.51	vs. Small (R) $21,558.03	$34,589.54
13th Calif.	Teague (R) $27,577.86	vs. O'Reilly (D) $ 6,649.82	$34,227.68
1st Wash.	Pelly (R) $15,123.63	vs. Mitchell (D) $16,280.58	$31,404.21
AL Wash.	Magnuson (D) $12,259.40	vs. Canwell (R) $17,436.97	$29,696.37
2nd Md.	Devereux (R) $15,886.75	vs. Bolton (D) $ 7,683.76	$23,570.51
5th Wash.	Horan (R) $ 9,552.63	vs. Garton (D) $11,693.33	$21,245.96
1st Fla.	Cramer (R) $16,315.20	vs. Campbell (D) $ 3,705.00	$20,020.20
10th Va.	Broyhill (R) $12,085.47	vs. Webb (D) $ 6,769.19	$18,854.66
2nd Neb.	Chase (R) $12,290.00	vs. Hart (D) $ 5,830.75	$18,120.75

As with the list of Senatorial candidates who reported spending the largest sums, the foregoing list of House races does not tell the full story. Forty-seven independent committees supporting various House candidates filed reports with the Clerk of the House, and examination of these reports, summarized on page 743, shows that total spending as reported by candidates and committees was in excess of $20,000 in several more contests.

On the basis of reported committee spending plus spending reported by candidates, the most expensive House contest in 1954 occurred in the Ninth District of Ohio, where the Independent incumbent, Frazier Reams, was defeated by Democrat Thomas L. Ashley. Reams reported spending $2,373.53, while Ashley reported $10,832.67. Irving C. Reynolds, the GOP contestant, reported no spending. However, the Reynolds for Congress Committee reported $21,543.91. In addition, the Reams for Congress Committee reported $7,889.31. These four items, when added, total $42,639.42.

But there is further evidence that other contests may have been even more expensive and would have appeared so had other independent committees filed reports with the Clerk of the House. For example, in the Third District contest in Oregon, Mrs. Edith Green (D), who defeated Thomas L. McCall (R), reported spending $712.73. McCall reported nothing. However, the McCall for Congress Committee reported $27,366.66. What was not reported to Congress was $22,782.01 spent by the Green for Congress Committee. This sum, together with another $735 spent by others in behalf of Mrs. Green, is cited in the aforementioned report of Oregon's Secretary of State. Thus the total for the Third District contest was at least $51,596.40.

On the basis of spending as reported by candidates alone, it appears that House contests were most expensive in Maryland and in Washington. In Maryland, 13 candidates for seven seats reported spending a total of $111,000, an average of almost $16,000 per seat. In Washington, 15 candidates for seven seats reported a total of $125,000, an average of $18,000 per seat.

These two states led in 1952 spending as well, when 14 contestants for seven Maryland seats reported a total of $106,000, an average of some $15,000 per seat, and 18 contestants for seven Washington seats reported $98,000, an average of $14,000 per seat. As might be expected, three of the Maryland and Washington races were among the top 10 both in 1952 and 1954. They were the Fifth Maryland, where Small defeated Lankford in 1952 ($33,100); Washington At Large, where Magnuson won over Canwell in 1952 ($28,300); and the Second Maryland, where Devereux defeated Bolton in 1952 ($22,800).

In 1954, 40 House candidates failed to file reports. Only two of them were elected -- Reps. John J. Rooney (D N.Y.), first elected to the 78th Congress, and Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.), a newcomer in the 84th.

Large Individual Contributors

Candidates and committees required to file reports must indicate the source of their receipts, in addition to itemizing their expenditures. Contributions of $1,000 or more to Senatorial candidates are listed beginning on page 733. Contributions of $1,000 or more to 27 political committees, which reported gifts of that size from individuals, are listed by the states from which contributors gave, beginning on page 748. Analysis of the latter list reveals the following distribution:

Republican committees received $1,434,084.30 in gifts of $1,000 or more, from 738 contributions.

Democratic Committees received $418,900 in gifts of $1,000 or more from 244 contributions. (See $1000-or-more Club box, on next page.)

Under terms of the Hatch Political Activities Act of 1939, individual contributions are supposedly limited to $5,000 a year. However, the limit is interpreted to govern only the amount that may be given to one candidate or one committee. Not included, of course, are state or local committees, to which an individual might give any amount of money. Furthermore, there is nothing to prevent wealthy families from contributing individually a large aggregate of funds.

Thus, in 1954, it appears that 10 members of the Rockefeller family gave an aggregate of $66,000 to various Republican campaign committees, and that 14 members of the duPont family of Delaware gave at least $51,500 to GOP groups. Other large GOP contributors included the Mellons of Pittsburgh, $40,000; and the Pews of Philadelphia, $25,000. (Ernest S. Brown, unsuccessful GOP candidate for the Senate in Nevada, also reported receiving $4,000 from the Pews.)

In the $1,000-and-over group among Democrats were Adlai E. Stevenson, Gov. Averell Harriman (N.Y.), six Senators, two former Senators, at least one Representative, and former officials in Democratic Administrations. Among the latter were Edwin W. Pauley, John L. Sullivan, Clark Clifford, Leslie L. Biffle, and Joseph E. Davies.

Individuals are required to report their contributions only if they are made directly to candidates in more than one state. No reports of gifts to committees are required.

Only four individuals, all from Houston, Texas, filed reports for 1954 on this basis. Best known was H.R. Cullen, who reported gifts totaling $3,500 to three candidates. In addition, however, two national GOP committees reported receiving gifts totaling $16,000 from the Cullen family.

In 1952, Cullen filed an individual report showing contributions totaling $53,000 to various candidates and committees of both parties. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 56.)

Spending Limits

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925, which governs disclosure of and limits on political spending, sets the following limits for candidates (no limits are placed on committees by this Act):

For Senator, $10,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying 3 cents by the total number of votes cast at the last general election for that office, but in no case more than $25,000.

For Representative, $2,500, or a sum calculated as above, but in no case more than $5,000.

However, the law excludes the following types of expenditures from the amount subject to the limitations: a candidate's personal, traveling or subsistence expenses; cost of stationery, postage, writing or printing (other than billboards or newspaper ads); cost of distributing letters, circulars or posters, and cost of telegraph and telephone service.

These limits apply in 18 states which have no laws limiting either primary or general election expenditures for federal office, and in six other states which limit primary spending only. The federal limits also apply in those other states which have laws setting higher limits.

Following are the 24 states which limit general election spending for federal candidates. An asterisk denotes states where the total sum covers primary as well as general elections.

*ALABAMA -- Senate, $50,000; House, $10,000.
*ARKANSAS -- Senate and House, one year's salary.
*CONNECTICUT -- Senate, one-third year's salary; House, $15 for each 1,000 voters for that office.

*INDIANA -- Senate, $25,000; House, $10,000.
IOWA -- Senate and House, one-half year's salary.
MARYLAND -- Senate and House, $10 per 1,000 for first 50,000 voters registered to vote for that office in last election, and $5 per 1,000 over 50,000.
MASSACHUSETTS -- Senate, $20,000; House, $7,500.
MICHIGAN -- Senate and House, $20 per 1,000 votes cast for governor in last Presidential election.
*MISSOURI -- Senate and House, $200 for first 5,000 voters, $4 per 100 from 5,000 to 25,000, $2 per 100 from 25,000 to 50,000, $1 per 100 over 50,000.
MONTANA -- Senate and House, 10 percent of year's salary.
NEW HAMPSHIRE -- Senate, $3,000; House, $1,500.

OREGON -- Senate and House, 10 percent of one year's salary.
*SOUTH DAKOTA -- Senate and House, one-half year's salary.
TENNESSEE -- Senate, $10,000; House, $5,000.
*UTAH -- Senate, $4,000; House, $2,000.
WEST VIRGINIA -- Senate and House, $75 per county.
WISCONSIN -- Senate, $10,000; House, $2,500.
WYOMING -- Senate and House, one-half year's salary.

No conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of either federal or state spending limits by candidates listed in this report. Any spending above the applicable limit may have been for items excluded by law.

Reforms Advocated

Bills (S 636, HR 3139) introduced by Sen. Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.) and Rep. Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.) would carry out most of the changes recommended in a 1953 report by a Senate subcommittee. S 636 was reported but did not receive floor action in 1955. (See p. 375.) Another bill on campaign spending was HR 1767, by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.). These proposals were designed to correct defects generally recognized in the Corrupt Practices Act and the Hatch Political Activities Act. They aimed at full public disclosure of campaign finances, and "realistic" limits on campaign expenditures.

The Hennings-Udall proposal would:

Cover all elections, including primaries.

Require all committees to file, whether political or not, if they participate in campaigns.

Prevent a committee from operating without authorization of the candidate.

Raise spending limits for Senatorial candidates to $50,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying 10 cents by the total vote cast for that office in the last primary or general election but not more than $250,000. (The limit would apply to all spending in behalf of a candidate, including that of committees.)

Raise spending limit for House candidates to $12,500, or the sum calculated as above but not more than $25,000.

Limit contributions by individuals to an aggregate of $10,000 to all candidates and committees.)

Limit contributions to, and expenditures by, national political committees -- now held to $3 million a year by the Hatch Act -- to an amount equaling the sum obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total vote cast for President in any one of the last three elections. (On the basis of the 1952 election, that would raise the limit to more than $12 million.)

The Boggs bill would fix each national committee's limit at $10 million, and impose a $1 million limit for any other political committee operating in federal elections. Boggs would also limit maximum spending by Senatorial candidates to $50,000 and by House candidates to $5,000, but neither limit would include committee spending. Individuals could contribute up to $50,000 a year, but no more than $5,000 to one candidate for President, $2,500 to one candidate for Senator, and $1,500 to one candidate for Representative.

Miscellaneous Groups

Fifteen miscellaneous organizations and four individuals reported total expenditures of $520,694.02 to the Clerk of the House. They also reported receipts of $517,824.21.

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act requires reports of political committees and individuals working to influence elections. A number of the following organizations, however, did not appear to have participated directly in elections. Their detailed expenditures showed spending was primarily for literature and organizational and educational activities.

Among the groups listing specific election expenditures was Americans for America, which worked in behalf of eight Republicans and two Democrats, Laurie Battle (Ala.) and Pat Sutton (Tenn.) Their largest item ($5,350) was spent for Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa).

Americans for Democratic Action contributed money to the campaigns of five Senatorial and 15 Congressional candidates -- all Democrats. The (Hubert H.) Humphrey (D Minn.) Volunteer Committee received $2,630 while the remaining sums dropped to $100 or less.

The Committee for Collective Security donated $100 each to the campaigns of Herbert B. Warburton (R Del.), who lost, and three winning Democrats -- Sens. Paul H. Douglas (Ill.), James E. Murray (Mont.) and Richard L. Neuberger (Ore.).

The National Committee for an Effective Congress gave its support to 15 Democratic Senatorial candidates, 10 of whom won their races, and two winning Congressmen -- one Democrat and one Republican.

The 1954 Campaign Appeal divided its support between the parties. Douglas and Neuberger each received $125, while $75 was spent for Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) and John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.).

Americans for Democratic Action. Regular Account -- received $158,502.79, spent $149,558.84. Non-Political Account -- received $46,770.00, spent $46,682.67.

No Tax - No War -- received $33.10, spent $25.40.

Milner, Robert W., Jr., Houston, Texas -- his report was returned to him upon his request.

Four individuals, all of Houston, Texas, filed reports in compliance with the Corrupt Practices Act, which requires statements from those who spend $50 or more "other than by contribution to a political committee" to influence elections in two or more states. (For a list of their committee contributions see p. 756.)

Individuals are restricted by the Hatch Act from contributing more than $5,000 during any calendar year to or on behalf of any candidate for federal office. Contributions to any committee or candidate above $3,000 are subject to the federal gift tax law.

H.R. Cullen, reported contributions of $2,500 to Congressman Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) and $500 apiece to Robert L. Jones (R Maine) and L.C. Battle (D Ala.), both of whom lost in Senatorial primaries.

Douglas B. Marshall also gave $500 to Robert L. Jones and $100 to Joseph A. Schafer (R Pa.), loser in the Fifth District primary.

Corbin J. Robertson contributed $2,500 to the campaign of Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.).

Robert W. Milner, Jr., requested the return of his report (on the grounds that he was not subject to the law) before CQ's tabulation was made.

SENATE CAMPAIGN SPENDING

This is a state-by-state summation of reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate by candidates for Senate seats in the 1954 election. Winners are listed first.

Of the 93 candidates, including write-in candidates, 76 filed reports. The 17 who did not file reports were minor party candidates.

Some candidates included reports of committees working for their election. In other cases these reports apparently were made only to state officials and were not available to Congressional Quarterly. These totals, therefore, are only partial.

Candidates and their election committees reported to the Senate Secretary total spending of $870,181.02. Of this, 40 Democratic candidates spent $461,375.37 and 33 Republicans spent $406,465.65. Three independent candidates filed reports with total spending of $2,340.

(Note: No conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of spending limits by any individuals listed here. See explanation, p. 727.)

Labor, Committee Contributions

Here is a breakdown of contributions to Senatorial candidates and/or their committees, as reported by the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee of 1954 and those 11 labor groups indentified by asterisks on page 730.

The two Committees and the labor groups also sent money to several state committees, but as it was not designated to a particular candidate, it is not included here.

The total sums received for each race are combined opposite the candidates' names under the source. Candidates receiving no funds from these sources are not listed.

According to these reports, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (Maine) was the only Republican candidate receiving labor support.

RECEIPTS, SPENDING OF HOUSE CANDIDATES

More than 870 candidates were contenders for 435 House seats and two delegate positions in the 84th Congress.

Of these candidates, 831 filed with the Clerk of the House some or all of the campaign spending and contribution reports required by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. (Forty others did not file reports, and of these, two were elected -- Reps. John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) and Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.). They reported total spending of $2.2 million and total contributions of $1.8 million. These totals were computed by Congressional Quarterly.

The list which follows contains total contributions and expenditures during the 1954 campaign of candidates who reported under the Act to the Clerk of the House.

Candidates are listed by state and district, with the winner listed first. The chart includes all candidates except those who received write-in votes but did not report. Write-in candidates are listed if they filed a report.

COLUMN KEYS

Column 1. -- Total contributions as reported by the Candidate.
Column 2. -- Total limited, or itemized expenditures (those expenses, unspecified by the law, but subject to its limits.)
Column 3. -- Total unlimited or unitemized expenditures (specified personal expenses which are exempt under the law.)
Column 4. -- This column was compiled by CQ by adding the limited and unlimited spending figures. Many reports had all expenditures itemized (limited and unlimited) with one total given. In such cases CQ lists the total under Column 2. Where other reports listed the same total in both columns, the report was examined and the total placed in one column or the other.

Under terms of the Act candidates are required to file preliminary reports (not less than 10 nor more than 15 days before elections) and final reports (within 30 days after elections.) Unless state laws prescribe a smaller amount, they are restricted to itemized expenditures of $2,500 or the sum obtained by multiplying by 3 cents the total votes cast in the preceding general election, but not to exceed $5,000.

Major itemized expenditures usually were for billboards, newspaper advertising, and radio and television broadcasting for which expenditures are limited under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. Unitemized expenditures include those for travel, paper, postage, and distribution of letters and circulars, among others, and are specifically excluded from the spending limitations.

(Note: no conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of spending limits by any individuals listed in this report. Candidates may have filled out their reports incorrectly.)

Total spending and contributions for all House candidates within a state are listed opposite the state's name.

Labor, Committee Contributions

The National Republican Congressional Committee and the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee (both of the House) are charged with helping House candidates of their parties in elections and coordinating local and national campaigns. The help usually takes the form of contributions to the candidate and/or committees working in his behalf. Groups may, however, extend aid through contributions to official state organizations and by direct participation, speakers, and advertising.

For the following listing CQ included only contributions to candidates and/or committees working for them. Totals are listed opposite candidates' names.

Candidates are listed by state and district, with Republicans listed above Democrats. The first column shows combined total contributions by the National Republican Congressional Committee. The second column lists contributions by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

The third column shows combined sums contributed by 11 labor groups, which are identified by asterisks on page 730. Labor reported contributions to the campaigns of only four Republican candidates, all of whom were re-elected. They were John B. Bennett (Mich.), Robert J. Corbett (Pa.), James G. Fulton (Pa.) and Gardner R. Withrow (Wis.).

CAMPAIGN DONATIONS OF $1,000 OR MORE

Following is a state list of individuals and organizations contributing $1,000 or more to political committees for use in the 1954 Congressional elections.

This information was obtained from reports of approximately 100 such political committees filed with the Clerk of the House. Only 27 committees, however, reported receipts of $1,000 or more from individuals as well as organizations. These 27 groups are identified in parentheses after each contribution, according to the key on the next page.

In addition, 11 labor groups reported receiving 34 contributions of $1,000 or more from other labor organizations. The Nebraska Republican State Central Committee also received two contributions of $1,000 or more from other state Republican committees.

The Hatch Act makes it illegal for one person to give more than $5,000 to one group or individual, but permits him to give that amount to any number of different groups. Family members are regarded individually under the law.

In some cases contributions under $1,000 are included where the donor had given larger sums elsewhere.

Contributors represented all 48 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, and Puerto Rico. Some people are listed under more than one state according to the address given in the report.

The Democratic Campaign Committee of Kentucky and the Republican State Committee of Wyoming did not list all contributors' addresses. Such persons were listed under the state in which the committee is located when their residence was unknown. Several Senators and Congressmen may be found under the District of Columbia.

PLATFORMS VS. PERFORMANCE

Parties' 1952 Platforms Matched Against Congress' And the Administration's 1953-1955 Performance

Both Democrats and Republicans can claim they kept most of their 1952 platform pledges and can charge that their opponents broke faith with the voters.

The paradox is no accident. Platforms are written in generalities broad enough to cover almost any interpretation the reader chooses.

Even when clear-cut action is taken on a concrete pledge, responsibility may be confused. If federal spending is cut, who gets the credit? And if farm prices fall, who's to blame?

Another source of confusion: Republicans and Democrats pilfered planks from each other's platforms. Each party helped fulfill its opponent's pledges, and then claimed credit.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R N.H.) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee exclaims: "Never before has a political party (the Republicans) kept so faithfully its promises to the voters!" Chairman Paul M. Butler of the Democratic National Committee replies: "The Eisenhower Administration and the majority of the Republicans in Congress have broken their campaign promises to farmers, to labor, and to small business."

Both leaders have a stake in convincing the voters that their parties are trustworthy. Nominating conventions will make a new set of promises in 1956.

Congressional Quarterly has kept books on the record for 1953 through 1955, matching the campaign platforms against the parties' performances. Highlights of the ledger:

Democrats promised to "protect" producers of the six basic farm commodities with "mandatory price support(s)...at not less than 90 percent of parity." Republicans "aimed at full parity prices for all farm products in the market place...."

Both parties failed. Democrats voted to continue rigid supports at 90 percent of parity, but the Administration's program of lower, flexible supports was enacted. Farm prices on the market declined.

Democrats and Republicans pledged to work for reduction of federal spending. Spending was reduced, although the parties did not always agree on where to cut down.

The Republicans set out to attain the "goal" of a "balanced budget" and a "reduced national debt." They failed, as the deficit continued and the debt ceiling was raised -- with bipartisan support. The Administration held out hope that the budget might be balanced by June 30, 1956.

The GOP promised "a general tax reduction," and the Democrats favored "reducing taxes, especially for people with lower incomes..." Republicans also pledged "thorough revision and codification" of the tax laws. Taxes were cut and the revenue laws were overhauled. Democrats tried but failed to enact reductions aimed specifically at low-income groups.

Both parties said they would seek peace in Korea. A cease-fire was signed, but a final settlement was not achieved.

Democrats promised more than the Republicans in their social security plank. Congressional performance backed the broader program, with both parties supporting extension of coverage and increased benefit payments.

In a major platform split, the Democrats called for repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law while the GOP promised amendments. Neither party came through.

Details of the Platforms vs. Performance record, with pledges and action by the Administration and Congress -- 1953-55 -- classified according to major categories and sub-categories:

AGRICULTURE
Price Supports

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We will continue to protect the producers of basic agricultural commodities under the terms of a mandatory price support program at not less than 90 percent of parity. We continue to advocate practical methods for extending price supports to other storables and to the producers of perishable commodities...."

REPUBLICANS -- "We favor a farm program aimed at full parity prices for all farm products in the market place.... We condemn as a fraud on both the farmer and the consumer the Brannan plan scheme to pay direct subsidies from the federal Treasury in lieu of prices to producers.... Our program should include commodity loans on all non-perishable products supported at the level necessary to maintain a balanced production. Where government action on perishable commodities is desirable, we recommend locally controlled marketing agreements and other voluntary methods.... We do not believe in restrictions on the American farmers' ability to produce."

Performance

In 1954 most Republicans supported and Congress enacted a system of flexible (or sliding-scale) price supports on basic commodities. Democrats, joined by some Republicans, failed in efforts to retain rigid (or fixed) supports at 90 percent of parity in 1954, and again in 1955 when the Senate failed to act on a House-passed bill to restore the rigid-supports system. Efforts to raise the minimum support level for dairy products and to establish mandatory support of small grains -- backed by most Democrats and opposed by most Republicans -- failed. The Senate rejected price supports for beef cattle, proposed by Democrats in 1954.

ADMINISTRATION

President Eisenhower in 1954 asked Congress to replace rigid price supports on five basic commodities -- wheat, cotton, corn, rice, and peanuts -- with flexible supports; to continue 90 percent supports for the sixth basic, tobacco; and to authorize direct compensatory payments to wool producers as a substitute for orthodox price supports. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson set 1955 supports at the following levels:

Basic Commodities -- Wheat, 82.5 percent of parity, reduced from 90; corn, 87 percent, reduced from 90; rice, 86 percent, reduced from 91; cotton and peanuts, 90 percent, the same level as in 1954. Tobacco, the sixth basic, retained rigid supports at 90 percent of parity.

Wool -- 106 percent of parity, increased from 90.

Dairy Products -- Butterfat, 76 percent of parity, reduced from 90; manufacturing milk, 80 percent, reduced from 90. In 1954, supports for butterfat and manufacturing milk were reduced to 75 percent of parity.

Other Commodities -- Feed grains and other non-basic commodities, reduced an average of 15 percent.

CONGRESS

Basic Commodities -- Set price supports on wheat, cotton, corn, rice and peanuts on a flexible scale ranging from 82.5 to 90 percent of parity for 1955, from 75 to 90 percent thereafter. Continued supports on tobacco at 90 percent of parity.

Wool -- Authorized direct cash payments to producers to compensate for gaps between the support level -- 60 to 110 percent of parity -- and the price on the free market.

Dairy Products -- Continued price supports between 75 and 90 percent of parity and extended supports to fluid milk and butterfat.

Other Commodities -- Repealed the ban against direct price supports for Irish potatoes. Continued discretionary price supports for non-basic feed grains, oil seeds, eggs, and poultry. Continued mandatory supports for tung nuts and honey between 60 and 90 percent of parity.

In 1955, the House passed a bill to restore rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity for the five basic commodities and to raise the minimum support level for dairy products from 75 to 80 percent of parity. The Senate did not act on the measure.

Soil and Water Conservation

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We will accelerate programs of upstream flood prevention, watershed protection, and soil,... and water conservation in all parts of the country.... We will continue the widest possible farmer participation... in the conduct and administration of these...programs...."

REPUBLICANS -- "We support a constructive and expanded soil conservation program administered through locally controlled local districts and which shall emphasize that payments shall be made for practices and improvements of a permanent nature."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Conservation Program -- Gave greater responsibility to state offices of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and abolished the seven regional SCS offices.

Upstream Watersheds -- Asked Congress to authorize farmers in local organizations to take the initiative to strengthen conservation in upstream watersheds, in cooperation with federal agencies.

CONGRESS

Conservation Payments -- Extended through 1956 cost-sharing assistace to farmers for approved soil and water conservation practices. Required compliance with acreage allotments as a condition for receiving conservation payments, then repealed the penalty provision in 1955. Voted larged authorizations for conservation payments than requested by the Administration in 1953 and 1955. Conservation authorizations compared to the $250 million voted for 1953 in the last year of the Truman Administration, 1952:

1953, decreased to $195 million
1954, $250 million
1955, $250 million.

Soil Conservation Service -- Appropriations for SCS operation of conservation and flood prevention programs, compared to the $62.3 voted in 1952 for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $71.5 million
Fiscal 1955, increased to $74.5 million
Fiscal 1956, increased to $81.3 million.

Both parties supported the increases.

Upstream Watersheds -- Enacted, with bipartisan support, a 1954 bill authorizing federal cost-sharing assistance to local watershed groups willing to initiate and carry out upstream watershed conservation measures.

Water Conservation Loans -- Extended eligibility for loans and loan insurance to farmers and farm groups in all 48 states. This aid in financing construction of water conservation facilities had been limited to the 17 western states. Both parties backed the 1954 extension.

Farm Credit

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We have provided credit facilities for all agriculture, including means by which young men, veterans...and farm tenants have been encouraged to become farmers and farm home-owners, and through which low-income farmers have been assisted in establishing self-sustaining and fully productive farm units. We will not waver in our efforts to provide such incentives."

REPUBLICANS -- "Our program includes...sufficient farm credit..."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Farm Credit Administration -- Asked Congress in 1953 to permit gradual retirement of government capital from FCA. FCA continued to extend credit through the federal intermediate credit banks to production credit associations and privately capitalized farm lending institutions by discounting short-term notes. New FCA loan commitments compared to the $1.9 billion in commitments for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $1.8 billion
Fiscal 1955, $1.9 billion (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, increased to $2 billion (estimated).

Farmers Home Administration -- New FHA commitments for loans to farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources, compared to the $176 million in commitments for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $192 million
Fiscal 1955, increased to $186 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, increased to $217 million (estimated).

Low-Income Farmers -- President Eisenhower in 1955 recommended to Congress a 15-point program to aid low-income farmers. New loan authority was a key point.

CONGRESS

Farm Credit Administration -- Reorganized the FCA in 1953 as an independent agency under the control of a 13-member board composed mainly of farmers. The law laid the groundwork for systematically retiring government capital from the program and granting farmers greater control of FCA-supervised credit agencies. In 1955, Congress provided for the retirement of government capital from FCA-supervised banks for cooperatives. Both measures were passed with bipartisan support.

Disaster Loans -- Passed the Farmers and Stockmen Emergency Assistance Act in 1953, authorizing loans in disaster areas to those unable to obtain financing elsewhere. Extended the Act for two years in 1955. Authorized, in 1954, up to $15 million in federal loans to farmers and ranchers suffering "economic disaster" because of declining prices, and renewed the program for two years in 1955. Cut maximum interest rates on "economic disaster" loans to 3 percent, reversing an increase to 5 percent ordered by the Secretary of Agriculture in 1955. These disaster loan measures were supported by both parties.

Loans to Low-Income Farmers -- Took no action in 1955 on an Administration bill to establish a new program for loans to low-income and part-time farmers unable to obtain credit elsewhere.

REFERENCES -- CQ Almanacs, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 106ff, 114ff, 132ff; Vol. X, 1954, pp. 134, 148ff; Vol. XI, 1955, pp. 56ff, 182ff, 188.

Rural Electrification

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We will continue to fight to make electricity available to all rural homes, with adequate facilities for the generation and transmission of power. Through the rural telephone program...we will provide opportunity for every farm home to have this modern essential service...We favor...wider and more equitable distribution of electric energy at the lower cost to the consumer with continuing preference to public agencies and REA cooperatives."

REPUBLICANS -- "We support the principle of bona fide farmer-owned, farmer-operated cooperatives and urge the further development of rural electrification and communication, with federally assisted production of power and facilities for distribution when these are not adequately available through private enterprise at fair rates."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Rural Electrification Administration new commitments for electricity and telephone loans, compared to the $201 million in commitments for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $242 million
Fiscal 1955, increased to $220 million
Fiscal 1956, increased to $265 million (estimated).

CONGRESS

Modified the formula for allocating REA loan funds to the states, channeling a bigger share into loans for expanding and improving existing systems -- as opposed to establishing new systems in unelectrified areas. Both parties supported this 1955 measure.

New authorizations for REA electricity and telephone loans, compared to the $92.5 million authorized for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $202.5 million; 40 percent above President's request
Fiscal 1955, increased to $210 million; 54 percent above request
Fiscal 1956, increased to $235 million; 2 percent above request.

Senate Republicans opposed the fiscal 1955 increase; otherwise, both parties supported increases.

VOTE

Increase loan authorization for rural electrification from $100 million to $135 million. Accepted.

EDUCATION AND WELFARE

Education

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We urge that federal contributions be made available to state and local units which adhere to basic minimum standards....We pledge immediate consideration for those school systems which need further legislation to provide federal aid for new school construction, teachers' salaries and school maintenance and repair..."

REPUBLICANS -- "The tradition of popular education, tax supported and free to all, is strong with our people. The responsibility for sustaining this system of popular education has always rested upon the local communities and the states. We subscribe fully to this principle."

Performance

The 84th Congress deferred action on the President's plan to stimulate school construction. Both parties supported extension of school aid to areas where federal defense activities increased the school population abnormally, but the amount of aid was reduced.

ADMINISTRATION

School Construction -- Requested in 1955 a program of federal aid for construction of school buildings through purchase of local school bonds, support of a lease-purchase plan, and grants-in-aid of $200 million in three years for impoverished school districts. Proposed total federal, state, and local school construction spending of $7 billion in three years. All but $220 million of the federal government's $1.12 billion contribution would be repaid to the Treasury.

Federally Impacted Areas -- Requested extension of laws authorizing federal aid for school construction and operation in areas crowded because of defense projects and other federal activities.

Studies of Education Problems -- Requested authorization for a national conference to study the nation's educational problems; authority for the Office of Education to conduct research in cooperation with state and local agencies; and establishment of an advisory committee on education in the Office of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

CONGRESS

School Construction -- Deferred action on a bill, reported to the House in 1955, to establish a four-year program of federal aid through bond purchases, support of lease-purchase plans, and grants to states of up to $1.6 billion -- eight times the amount requested by the President.

Federally Impacted Areas -- Extended authority for federal aid for school construction, operation, and maintenance through June, 1957. Appropriations compared to the $255.5 million voted for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $197.4 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $193.5 million
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $89 million.

Studies of Education Problems -- Authorized a White House Conference on Education and funds for preparatory state conferences; authorized Office of Education contracts with colleges for joint studies of education problems; established a nine-member National Advisory Committee on Education. House Democrats opposed the Advisory Committee; the other measures were enacted with bipartisan support.

Oil-for-Education -- A Senate amendment which eventually would have earmarked federal oil and mineral revenues from the continental shelf for aid to education was deleted by a conference committee in 1953.

VOTE

Dedicate federal revenues from oil and mineral leases on the continental shelf to defense during national emergency, thereafter to education. Accepted, but later deleted in conference.

Social Security

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We favor further strengthening of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, through...increasing benefits, extending them to more people, and lowering the retirement age for women. We favor the complete elimination of the work clause...Those contributing... should be permitted to draw benefits upon reaching the age of eligibility and still continue to work."

REPUBLICANS -- "The best assurance of preserving the benefits for which the worker paid is to stop the inflation which causes...loss of purchasing power, and that we propose to do. We favor amendment of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance system to provide coverage for those justly entitled to it but who are excluded..."

Performance

Social security coverage was extended to 10 million more workers and monthly benefit payments were increased, with the support of the President and both parties. The House in 1955 passed, with bipartisan support, a Democratic-sponsored bill to lower the eligibility age for women, extend coverage to more occupations, and pay disability benefits. The Senate deferred action.

ADMINISTRATION

Coverage -- Requested extension to 10.5 million workers, including domestics, lawyers, architects, physicians, dentists, self-employed farmers, farm laborers not already covered, clergymen, and state and local government employees.

Benefits -- Requested increases in minimum and maximum monthly payments.

"Work Clause" -- Requested revision to permit earnings of as much as $1,000 a year without loss of benefit payments.

CONGRESS

Coverage -- Extended OASI in 1954 to about 10 million additional workers, including self-employed farmers, state and local government employees, farm workers, domestic workers, and ministers. Omitted coverage of physicians, lawyers, dentists, and certain other self-employed professionals. The House in 1955 passed and the Senate deferred action on a bill to extend coverage to all major recognized professional groups except physicians.

Benefits -- Increased monthly payments to $30 minimum and $108.50 maximum for individuals, and to a maximum of $200 for families.

"Work Clause" -- Increased to $1,200 the amount a retired person might earn without losing benefits; removed the earnings limitation for workers at age 72.

Benefits for Women -- The House in 1955 passed and the Senate deferred action on a Democratic-sponsored bill to lower from 65 to 62 the age at which women would be eligible to collect retirement and survivors' benefits.

VOTES

Extend social security coverage, increase benefits, ease work clause. Passed.

Health

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We pledge...support for the campaign that modern medicine is waging against mental illness, cancer, heart disease...We advocate federal aid for medical education to help overcome the growing shortages of...trained health personnel...We pledge support for federal aid to hospital construction...increased federal aid to promote public health through preventive programs and health services, especially in rural areas...We also advocate a resolute attack on the heavy financial hazard of serious illness...The policy of aiding states...to insure needed maternity, child health and welfare services should be maintained and extended..."

REPUBLICANS -- "We recognize that the health of our people as well as their proper medical care cannot be maintained if subject to federal bureaucratic dictation. There should be a just division of responsibility between government, the physician, the voluntary hospital, and voluntary health insurance. We are opposed to federal compulsory health insurance...We shall support those health activities by government which stimulate the development of adequate hospital services without federal interference in local administration. We favor support of scientific research...encouragement of improved methods of assuring health protection."

Performance

The Administration failed in two attempts to establish federal reinsurance to expand private health insurance. Led by a majority of Democrats, the House killed a reinsurance bill in 1954, and Congress ignored the proposal in 1955.

Existing federal programs for medical research and hospital construction aid were continued. After cutting the fiscal 1954 budget in 1953, Congress in 1954 and 1955 voted more money for these programs than had been provided in 1952.

With support by both parties, Congress in 1954 authorized new programs of federal aid for construction of medical facilities other than general hospitals and expansion of vocational rehabilitation programs. Congress in 1955 did not act on Administration proposals for federal aid to help train health personnel, for expansion of private loans for construction of medical facilities, and for aid to states for medical care for persons on relief.

ADMINISTRATION

Health Insurance -- Proposed legislation to establish a federal reinsurance fund to encourage private voluntary insurance plans to expand coverage of severe illness, and low-income and rural groups.

Hospital Construction -- Proposed to stimulate state, local, and private construction of hospitals, clinics, and nursing homes through expanded federal grants and mortgage insurance of private loans. After cutting the fiscal 1954 budget, asked Congress to increase fiscal 1955 and 1956 funds for federal grants-in-aid for construction of hospitals and public health centers.

Research -- Cut the fiscal 1954 budget in 1953, then asked Congress to increase fiscal 1955 and 1956 funds for research by the National Institutes of Health on cancer, mental health, heart disease, and other illnesses.

Public Health Service -- Proposed to expand PHS programs, particularly for mothers and crippled children. Proposed greater flexibility in state use of PHS grants. Asked Congress for increased funds for all PHS programs for fiscal 1956, after cutting budget requests for fiscal 1954 and 1955 below the fiscal 1953 level.

Health Personnel -- Proposed to expand training of practical nurses and specialists through grants to states and establishment of traineeships by the Public Health Service.

Other Programs -- Proposed increased federal aid to state vocational rehabilitation programs, a new program of mental health grants, and federal aid for medical care of persons on state and local relief rolls.

CONGRESS

Health Insurance -- The House in 1954 killed a bill to establish federal reinsurance of private health insurance systems, and Congress took no action on reinsurance in 1955.

Hospital Construction -- Extended through June 30, 1957, the law authorizing federal aid to the states for hospital construction. Authorized, in 1954, a new program of aid to states for surveys and construction of hospitals for the chronically ill, rehabilitation facilities, nonprofit nursing homes, and diagnostic or treatment centers. Both measures received bipartisan support. Took no action in 1955 on an Administration-sponsored bill to provide federal mortgage insurance of private loans for construction of medical facilities. Appropriations for federal aid for hospital construction, compared to the $75 million appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased 13 percent to $65 million
Fiscal 1955, increased 28 percent to $96 million
Fiscal 1956, increased 61 percent to $111 million.

Research -- National Institutes of Health appropriations compared to the $59 million appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased 20 percent to $71.2 million
Fiscal 1955, increased 38 percent to $81.3 million
Fiscal 1956, increased 65 percent to record $97.8 million.

Public Health Service -- Took no action in 1955 on an Administration-sponsored bill to expand Public Health Service programs. Did not complete action on a House-passed bill to revise formulas for grants to the states. Increased appropriations for all PHS activities for fiscal 1956, after reducing PHS funds for fiscal 1954 and 1955 below the amount appropriated in 1952 for fiscal 1953.

Health Personnel -- Took no action on a 1955 omnibus health bill to provide grants and Public Health Service traineeships for training nurses and other medical specialists.

Other Programs -- Authorized with bipartisan support, increased federal aid for state vocational rehabilitation programs -- including training of doctors and other technicians -- and a three-year, $1.25 million program of federal aid for study of mental health problems. Took no action on Administration-sponsored legislation to expand federal grants for mental health projects and on Administration proposals to provide federal aid for medical care of persons on state and local relief rolls.

Housing

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We pledge ourselves to the fulfillment of the programs of private housing, public low-rent housing, slum clearance, urban redevelopment, farm housing, and housing research as authorized by the Housing Act of 1949...to enact additional legislation to promote housing required for defense workers, middle income families, aged persons and migratory farm laborers...to provide special housing aids to veterans and their families."

REPUBLICANS -- "With local cooperation we shall aid slum clearance."

Performance

Congress continued federal aid to private housing, slum clearance, and urban redevelopment programs, with the support of the Administration and both parties. The Housing Act of 1954 liberalized terms on government-backed loans for private housing. Administration agencies tightened, then eased, controls on financing of homes purchased with government-guaranteed mortgages.

The parties differed on federal aid to public housing. Compromises reduced authorizations for new public housing far below the 135,000 units per year authorized in 1949. The President requested 35,000 new units a year. A majority of House Republicans voted consistently to terminate public housing. House Democrats and both parties in the Senate voted to continue the program.

ADMINISTRATION

Public Housing -- Asked Congress in 1953 for authority to contract for 35,000 new public housing units in fiscal 1954. The fiscal 1953 authorization had been 35,000 units. Proposed in 1954 a four-year authorization of 140,000 units at the rate of 35,000 per year. Proposed in 1955 a two-year 70,000-unit program for low-income families and persons displaced by slum clearance and urban renewal operations.

Private Housing -- Asked Congress to increase the Federal Housing Administration's general insurance authorization, permit FHA to insure larger housing mortgages and loans, and empower FHA to insure mortgages -- on inexpensive homes for low-income families -- with small down payments and long maturities. Proposed reorganization of the Federal National Mortgage Association as a secondary market financed largely by private funds. Tightened, then relaxed, financing terms on mortgages backed by the FHA and Veterans Administration.

Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment -- Proposed an expanded program of federal loans and grants, and new authority for FHA insurance of private credit for elimination of slums and rehabilitation of neighborhoods.

Farm Housing -- Asked Congress to permit authority for farm housing loans under the 1949 Housing Act to expire as scheduled June 30, 1954.

CONGRESS

Public Housing -- Continued the pattern established in 1951 and 1952 of limiting new public housing contracts to a number far below the 135,000 units per year -- to a total of 810,000 -- authorized in 1949. Rejected Administration requests for four-year and two-year programs. Authorized one-year programs: fiscal 1954, 20,000 new units; fiscal 1955, 35,000; fiscal 1956, 45,000. Restricted construction under the fiscal 1955 authorization to dwellings needed to house persons displaced by slum clearance or other government programs. Removed the restriction from the fiscal 1956 authorization.

Private Housing -- Increased the FHA general mortgage insurance authorization, adding $4 billion to the amount outstanding July 1, 1955. Authorized the FHA to insure larger housing loans with longer maturities and to back loans on low-cost homes for low-income families. Reorganized the Federal National Mortgage Association in 1954, providing for gradual liquidation of the government's investment and its replacement by private funds.

Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment -- Expanded the existing federal program by making loans and grants available for urban renewal projects as well as slum clearance upon submission of workable local plans. Authorized a new program for FHA insurance of private credit for construction and rehabilitation of homes in blighted -- pre-slum -- areas. Increased by $500 million the authorization for federal assistance to slum clearance and urban renewal programs through fiscal 1957.

Farm Housing -- Extended authority for the farm housing loan program in 1954, when it was scheduled to expire, and again in 1955. Authorized $100 million in loans for farm houses and buildings and $12 million for farm improvements for fiscal 1956. Both measures received bipartisan support.

Defense Housing -- Twice extended, then terminated in 1955 federal authority for construction and FHA mortgage insurance of housing in critical defense areas. The parties agreed.

Research -- Provided, with bipartisan support, for liquidation of the Housing and Home Finance Agency research program by April 30, 1954.

Housing for the Aged -- The House in 1955 killed provisions of a Senate bill to establish a new program of public housing for elderly persons.

Housing for Migratory Workers -- Authorized a new program permitting FHA mortgage insurance of land and improvements for trailer parks.

FOREIGN POLICY

Foreign Aid

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "...the mutual security programs now under way...stand as landmarks of America's progress in mobilizing the strength of the free world to keep the peace...This nation needs strong allies...making their maximum contribution to the common defense...The continuance of ever stronger and more vigorous Point Four programs -- sponsored both by this country and by the United Nations -- is an indispensable element in creating a peaceful world."

REPUBLICANS -- "We shall always measure our foreign commitments so that they can be borne without endangering the economic health or sound finances of the United States...We shall not allow ourselves to be isolated and economically strangled, and we shall not let ourselves go bankrupt...We shall not try to buy good will...We favor international exchange of agricultural and industrial techniques, and programs for improvement of public health."

Performance

The President and majorities of both parties supported continued use of U.S. funds for military, economic, and technical foreign aid. Congress extended the mutual security program on an annual basis in 1953, 1954, and 1955, but steadily reduced appropriations and consistently cut the President's requests. The bulk of new funds was spent on military aid, but the proportion spent on economic aid increased -- from 30 percent in fiscal 1953 to an estimated 44 percent in fiscal 1956. Emphasis shifted from Europe to Asia.

ADMINISTRATION

Asked Congress in 1953, 1954, and 1955 to renew on an annual basis the mutual security program for military, economic, and technical aid. Steadily reduced budget estimates for the program below the $7.6 billion peak of fiscal 1951.

Proposed in 1954 that not less than $100 million of new mutual security funds be reserved for loans rather than grants.

Earmarked most of new funds for fiscal 1954 for the 13 North Atlantic Treaty allies in Europe, shifted emphasis to Asia in the following years.

Total spending for the mutual security program, compared to the $5.7 billion spent in fiscal 1953, when $4 billion -- 70 percent -- of funds were spent for military aid:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $4.9 billion, including $3.6 billion -- 73 percent -- for military aid
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $4.1 billion, including $2.2 billion -- 54 percent -- for military aid
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $3.9 billion, including $2.2 billion -- 56 percent -- for military aid (estimated).

CONGRESS

Renewed the mutual security program on an annual basis in 1953, 1954, and 1955, with support by both parties. Appropriations of new money, compared to the $6 billion appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $4.5 billion -- 12 percent below President's request
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $2.8 billion -- 19 percent below request
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $2.7 billion -- 17 percent below request.

In addition to new money, $2.1 billion was reappropriated for fiscal 1954, $2.5 billion for fiscal 1955, and $63 million for fiscal 1956.

Appropriations were enacted with bipartisan support, but the parties differed on amounts.

Required in 1954 that 30 percent of new money for economic aid be disbursed as loans, rather than grants. Repealed the requirement in 1955.

Continued the U.S. technical cooperation (Point Four) programs and progressively increased funds available for U.S. contributions to the United Nations' expanded program of technical assistance.

World Trade

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We vigorously oppose any restrictive policies which would weaken the highly successful reciprocal trade program fathered by Cordell Hull...Our... economy requires expanded export markets for our manufactured and agricultural products and a greater supply of essential imported raw materials...Our friends throughout the world will have opportunity to earn their own way to higher living standards with lessened dependence on our aid."

REPUBLICANS -- "...we shall press for the elimination of discriminatory practices against our exports such as preferential tariffs, monetary license restrictions, and other arbitrary devices. Our reciprocal trade agreements will be entered into and maintained on a basis of true reciprocity and to safeguard our domestic enterprises and the payrolls of our workers against unfair import competition."

Performance

After the 83rd Congress had deferred action on a long-range program, the 84th enacted a three-year extension of the President's authority to enter into reciprocal trade agreements, and added new power to negotiate tariff reductions. Senate Republicans successfully opposed the measure in 1954. Both parties supported it in 1955 after some "protectionist" amendments were added.

ADMINISTRATION

Reciprocal Trade Agreements -- Requested a three-year extension of authority to negotiate tariff agreements.

Tariff Reductions -- Requested authority to negotiate reduction of existing tariffs on a gradual, selective, reciprocal basis. After receiving the requested authority, announced negotiations with about 25 nations on reciprocal tariff concessions.

Protection of U.S. Industries -- Ordered tariff increases for alsike clover seed, watch movements, and bicycles under "escape clause" authority to protect injured U.S. industries; refused eight increases recommended by the Tariff Commission.

Trade Cooperation -- Requested approval of U.S. membership in an Organization for Trade Cooperation, set up to administer a 34-nation provisional code of fair competition in foreign trade practices.

CONGRESS

Reciprocal Trade Agreements -- Enacted one-year extensions in 1953 and 1954 of the President's authority to negotiate; extended his authority for three years in 1955.

Tariff Reductions -- Granted the President authority in 1955 to reduce tariffs through reciprocal agreements on a selective basis over a three-year period.

Protection of U.S. Industries -- The House killed a 1953 bill to impose oil-import quotas and lead and zinc tariff increases. Congress strengthened protection against foreign competition in 1955 by authorizing the President to limit imports threatening to impair national security, and by broadening definitions of injury warranting relief through use of peril-point and escape-clause provisions.

Trade Cooperation -- Took no action on a bill to approve U.S. membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

Discrimination Against U.S. Trade -- Authorized the President in 1955 to suspend trade concessions to any nation discriminating against U.S. commerce.

REPUBLICANS -- No plank.

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Immigration -- Asked Congress in 1953 and 1955 to revise the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 to correct "serious and inequitable restrictions" and "injustices."

Refugees -- Recommended legislation in 1953 to allow 240,000 refugees to enter the U.S. in two years, beyond annual quota of 154,657 established by the Immigration and Nationality Act. Recommended a 10-point program to liberalize the Refugee Relief Act in 1955.

CONGRESS

Immigration -- Took no action to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952.

Refugees -- Enacted the Refugee Relief Act of 1953 to admit 214,000 refugees to the U.S. in three years, without regard to annual immigration quotas. The measure was supported by most Republicans in both chambers and by a bare majority of Senate Democrats. The majority of House Democrats was opposed. Congress did not act in 1955 on the President's 10-point plan to liberalize the refugee law. Operation of the Refugee Relief Act was investigated.

Continued, and in most cases increased, appropriations for contributions to international and United Nations programs for relief and resettlement of refugees and escapees. Both parties backed the appropriations, which were incorporated in mutual security money bills.

REPUBLICANS -- "With foresight, the Korean War would never have happened...The supreme goal of our foreign policy will be an hono rable and just peace. We dedicate ourselves to wage peace and to win it...We shall end neglect of the Far East which Stalin has long identified as the road to victory over the West. We shall make it clear that we have no intention to sacrifice the East to gain time for the West."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Korea -- President-elect Eisenhower went to Korea to survey the situation before his inauguration. An armistice, dividing control of the Korean peninsula between Communist and non-Communist forces, was signed July 27, 1953. Negotiations for a permanent peace treaty and unification of North and South Korea did not succeed.

Nationalist China -- Announced in 1953 that the U.S. Navy would no longer block any Nationalist Chinese attacks on the China mainland. Signed a Mutual Defense Treaty with the Republic of China in 1954. Asked Congress in 1955 to authorize employment of U.S. armed forces to protect Formosa, the Pescadores, and related positions.

Defense Treaties -- Signed a Mutual Defense Treaty with the Republic of Korea in 1953. Signed the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty with Australia, New Zealand, France, Pakistan, the Philippines, Thailand, and the United Kingdom in 1954.

Economic and Military Aid -- Increased the share of new mutual security funds allotted to the Far East and the Pacific. Allotted funds for defense of Formosa, South Korea, and anti-Communist forces in Indo-China -- before the cease-fire in July, 1954.

CONGRESS

Nationalist China -- Adopted a resolution in 1955 authorizing the President to employ U.S. armed forces to protect Formosa, the Pescadores, and "related positions and territories." The Senate rejected attempts to narrow the resolution's scope. The Senate approved ratification of the Mutual Defense Treaty with the Republic of China. Congress went on record annually from 1953 through 1955 in opposition to admission of Communist China to the United Nations. All these measures were approved with bipartisan support.

Defense Treaties -- The Senate consented to ratification of the Korean Mutual Defense Treaty in 1954 with an "understanding" that it applied only to South Korean territory brought "lawfully" under control of that Republic. The Senate approved ratification of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty in 1955. Each treaty was supported by both parties.

REPUBLICANS -- "In Western Europe we shall use our friendly influence...for ending the political and economic divisions which alone prevent that vital area from being strong on its own right...We shall encourage and aid the development of collective security forces there, as elsewhere, so as to end the Soviet power to intimidate directly or by satellites..."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

European Unity -- Supported 1954 agreements providing for creation of a Western European Union to establish military limitations and integration of Western Europe's armed forces.

Germany -- Signed treaties in 1954 to end the occupation of West Germany, restore its sovereignty, and bring it into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. At the July, 1955, Big Four conference in Geneva, the President said "Germany should be reunited under a government freely chosen (by the Germans) and under conditions that would provide security both for nations of the East...and West..."

Austria -- Signed a treaty in 1955 to end the occupation of Austria and restore its sovereignty.

Military and Economic Aid -- Reduced mutual security funds allotted to Europe for defense support and technical and economic aid. Reduced the share of direct military aid funds allotted to Europe -- shifting the emphasis to Asia -- after fiscal 1954.

CONGRESS

Germany -- Adopted a resolution in 1953 urging free elections in East Germany and German unification. The Senate in 1955 approved ratification of treaties to end the occupation of West Germany and to bring it into NATO. Both parties supported the treaties and the German unification resolution.

Austria -- The Senate in 1955 approved -- with bipartisan support -- the treaty ending the occupation of Austria and restoring its sovereignty.

Communist-Satellites -- The Senate rejected -- on a bipartisan vote -- a resolution demanding a Big Four pledge to discuss the status of Communist satellites at the July, 1955, Geneva conference. The Senate then unanimously adopted a resolution expressing the "hope" that rights of self-government would be restored to the enslaved peoples of Europe and Asia.

REPUBLICANS -- "...the state of Israel appeals to our deepest humanitarian instincts. We shall continue our friendly interest in this...undertaking. We shall put our influence at the service of peace between Israel and the Arab states, and we shall cooperate to bring economic and social stability to that area."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Arab-Israel Conflict -- Offered in 1955 to participate in an international guarantee of the Arab-Israel borders if the opposing sides first would come to terms on frontier adjustment and refugee repatriation or resettlement. Suggested an international loan, with U.S. participation, to enable Israel to compensate Arab refugees. Opposed Communist sale of arms to Egypt; offered to consider sale of U.S. arms in the Middle East for "legitimate self-defense," but not for "an arms competition." Supported United Nations efforts to halt fighting.

Economic and Military Aid -- Earmarked millions of dollars in mutual security funds for aid to the Middle East and Africa, including non-military aid to both Israel and the Arab nations.

CONGRESS

Palestine Refugees -- Voted annual contributions -- with bipartisan support -- to the United Nations program for relief and rehabilitation of Arabs who had lived in Israel.

Expanded U.S. technical cooperation and economic aid programs in Latin America to the highest level since the beginning of the mutual security program.

Asked Congress in 1955 to provide additional funds to accelerate completion of the Inter-American Highway.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles sponsored the Caracas Declaration of Solidarity adopted by the Organization of American States in March, 1954. The Declaration warned that interference in the Western Hemisphere by the international Communist movement would constitute a threat to the peace of the hemisphere and would require consultation and action.

CONGRESS

Provided funds in 1955 for completion of the Inter-American Highway under an accelerated three-year program. Both parties supported acceleration.

Adopted a resolution expressing support of the Caracas Declaration of Solidarity. The resolution, adopted during a June, 1954, uprising against the Communist-influenced government in Guatemala, was supported by a majority of Democrats and Republicans.

LABOR

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We strongly advocate the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act...We advocate legislation that will enable the President to deal fairly and effectively with cases where a breakdown in collective bargaining seriously threatens the national safety or welfare...We pledge to continue our efforts so that government programs...shall prove a means of assuring minimum wages, hours, and protection to workers consistent with present-day progress."

REPUBLICANS -- "...we favor the retention of the Taft-Hartley Act...We urge the adoption of such amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act as time and experience show to be desirable, and which further protect the rights of labor, management and the public."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Taft-Hartley Act -- Asked Congress in 1954 and 1955 to amend the Taft-Hartley Act "to further the basic objectives" of the law. Proposed in 1954 machinery for secret strike ballots under government auspices.

Minimum Wage -- Asked Congress in 1955 to increase the national minimum wage from 75 to 90 cents an hour and to extend coverage.

Hours of Work -- Proposed in 1955 establishment of standards for overtime pay for work done under federal contract or with federal aid.

CONGRESS

Taft-Hartley Act -- The Senate killed, through recommittal, a 1954 bill to amend the Taft-Hartley Act along lines suggested by the President. Democrats voted unanimously for recommittal. Only three Republicans joined them. Congress made no attempt to amend the Act in 1955.

Minimum Wage -- Raised the national minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 per hour. Coverage of the law was not extended. Both parties backed the 1955 law.

Hours of Work -- Took no action on 1955 bills to revise the "Eight-Hour Laws."

MILITARY AND VETERANS
National Defense

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "The Democratic party will continue to stand unequivocally for strong, balanced defense forces for this country -- land, sea and air...We will continue to support the expansion and maintenance of the military and civil defense forces required for our national security...We reject the...view of those who say we cannot afford the expense and effort necessary to defend ourselves."

REPUBLICANS -- "...we should develop with utmost speed a force-in-being...of such power as to deter sudden attack or promptly and decisively defeat it...This defense ...requires the quickest possible development...of completely adequate air power and the simultaneous readiness of coordinated air, land and sea forces...with atomic energy weapons in abundance...We shall see to it that our military services are adequately supported in all ways required, including manpower, to perform their appropriate tasks...We shall review our entire preparedness program...strip it clean of waste, lack of coordination, inertia and conflict between the services."

Performance

The Administration progressively reduced the defense budget and Congress cut appropriations still further, but national security programs continued to account for about two-thirds of all federal spending. Spending for the Air Force and for atomic energy increased, while total military manpower and funds for the Army and Navy were cut. The President emphasized "effective nuclear-air retaliatory power" as the key to defense policy. Cut-backs were criticized by Democrats.

ADMINISTRATION

Defense Policy -- Proposed a national security program planned "on a long-term basis...(to) maintain essential military strength over an indefinite period of time without impairing the basic soundness of the United States economy." Rejected the concept of pointing toward a fixed date of maximum danger. Emphasized development of "nuclear-air retaliatory power...as the principal deterrent to military aggression."

Defense Spending -- Spending for defense, compared to the $43.6 billion spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased 8 percent to $40.3 billion
Fiscal 1955, decreased 19 percent to $35.5 billion
Fiscal 1956, decreased 22 percent to $34 billion (estimated).

Army, Navy Air Force -- Progressively increased the portion of defense funds spent on the Air Force and cut expenditures for the Army and Navy. Net budget expenditures for defense activities of the three services, by fiscal years, in billions of dollars:

	1953	1954	1955 (est.)	1956 (est.)
Army	$16.2	$12.9	$ 8.9	$8.85
Navy	11.9	11.3	9.8	9.7
Air Force	15.1	15.7	15.2	15.6

National Security -- Total spending for defense, atomic energy, military foreign aid, and stockpiling, compared to the $50.3 billion spent in fiscal 1953, when national security accounted for 68 percent of the budget:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $46.5 billion; 69 percent of budget
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $40.4 billion; 63 percent of budget
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $38.7 billion (estimated); 61 percent of budget.

Atomic Energy -- Increased spending for atomic energy programs from $1.8 billion in fiscal 1953 to an estimated $1.9 billion in fiscal 1956 -- more than was spent in any previous year.

Manpower -- Requested extension of the draft and enactment of a national reserve plan designed to maintain a ready reserve of 2.9 million men. Active-duty strength of the armed forces, compared to the average of 3.7 million men in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to 3.4 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to 3.2 million
Fiscal 1956, decreased to 2.9 million (estimated).

CONGRESS

Defense Funds -- Regular appropriations for defense, compared to the $46.6 billion appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $34.4 billion; 15 percent below President's request
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $28.8 billion, 4 percent below request
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $31.9 billion; 1 percent below request.

Democratic-led attempts to increase Air Force funds for fiscal 1954 and Army funds for fiscal 1955 were rejected.

Manpower -- Generally approved annual Defense Department reductions of the active-duty strength of the armed forces, but in 1955 provided for 22,000 more Marines than the Administration had requested. Extended the draft for four years in 1955. Enacted a national reserve plan in 1955; the compromise was not expected to provide the 2.9-million-man reserve pool requested by the President.

Atomic Energy -- Reduced annual appropriations below the amount appropriated for fiscal 1953. (Expenditures increased, despite cuts in appropriations, because money was available from previous years.)

Veterans

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We pledge...to continue and improve the national program of benefits for veterans and their families, to provide the best possible medical care and hospitalization for the disabled veteran, and to help provide every veteran an opportunity to be a productive and responsible citizen with an assured place in the civilian community...We pledge...to provide special housing aids to veterans and their families."

REPUBLICANS -- "...we propose that the aid and compensation given to veterans of previous wars be extended to veterans of the Korean conflict...compensation be fairly and adequately adjusted to meet changes in the cost of living...aid be given to veterans, particularly disabled veterans, to obtain suitable employment, by providing training and education, and through strict compliance with veterans' preference laws in federal service...The Veterans Administration should be equipped to provide and maintain medical and hospital care of the highest possible standard for all eligible veterans."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Pensions and Compensation -- Federal expenditures for veterans' pensions and compensation, compared to the $2,420,000,000 spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $2,482,000,000
Fiscal 1955, increased to $2,678,000,000
Fiscal 1956, increased to $2,798,000,000 (estimated).

The President in 1955 established a Commission on Veterans' Pensions to recommend "modernization" and "clarification of their (benefits') relationship to government social insurance and family protection programs."

Readjustment Benefits -- Federal expenditures for veterans' readjustment benefits -- principally for education, training, and unemployment compensation -- compared to the $797 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $704 million
Fiscal 1955, increased to $812 million
Fiscal 1956, increased to $941 million (estimated.).

The President proclaimed Jan. 31, 1955, as the deadline for accrual of eligibility for certain Korean veterans' benefits. Congress later extended some of these deadlines.

Hospital and Medical Care -- Federal expenditures for veterans' hospital and medical care, including costs of hospital construction, compared to the $757 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $783 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $733 million
Fiscal 1956, increased to $805 million (estimated).

Housing -- New commitments for VA direct and guaranteed loans to veterans -- mainly for housing -- compared to the $2.9 billion committed in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $3.5 billion
Fiscal 1955, increased to $5.2 billion (estimated).
Fiscal 1956, increased to $4.9 billion (estimated).

The VA in 1953 increased interest rates on guaranteed home loans to veterans from 4 to 4.5 percent. The President asked Congress in 1955 to extend the VA direct home loan program until July, 1957.

CONGRESS

Pensions and Compensation -- Enacted, with bipartisan support, two 1954 bills increasing pensions for disabled veterans, their dependents, and their survivors.

Readjustment Benefits -- Extended, with bipartisan support, deadlines for certain veterans' education, training, and unemployment benefits.

Hospital and Medical Care -- Rejected 1953 attempts to authorize the VA to investigate a veteran's affidavit of inability to pay hospital costs for non-service-connected disabilities. VA would have been permitted to deny the veteran free hospitalization upon determination that he could pay. A majority of Democrats, joined by a few Republicans, voted against the provisions.

Housing -- Action, with bipartisan support, on veterans' housing:

Extended through June, 1957, VA authority to make direct loans for homes and farmhouses to veterans unable to obtain private loans on equivalent terms.

Authorized $150 million a year to finance the direct-loan program.

Raised maximum interest rates on direct loans to veterans from 4 to 4.5 percent in 1953, matching the VA rate increase on guaranteed loans.

Authorized in 1955 direct loans to veterans to buy farms with farmhouses for personal residence use.

Authorized in 1955 loan guarantees and insurance for construction, purchase, or repair of farm housing on the same terms as residential housing.

Extended to Korean veterans the same preference in occupancy of public housing as had been afforded to veterans of World War II.

Extended farm housing, construction, and improvement loan benefits to Korean veterans in 1953.

Veterans' Preference Laws -- Amendments to the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944, enacted in 1953 with bipartisan support:

Required veterans to score passing grades on examinations in order to attain placement on federal job registers.

Excluded non-veterans from examinations for federal apprentice jobs as long as veterans were available; authorized the President to exclude non-veterans from competition for other government jobs.

Required placement of veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities of 10 percent or more at the top of civil service job registers if they pass examinations.

Veterans Administration -- Total appropriations for VA activities, compared to the $4,157,000,000 appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $4,199,000,000
Fiscal 1955, increased to $4,195,000,000
Fiscal 1956, increased to $4,466,000,000.

MISC. AND ADMINISTRATIVE

Loyalty and Security

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "The loyalty program of President Truman has served effectively to prevent infiltration by subversive elements and to protect honest and loyal public servants against unfounded and malicious attacks."

REPUBLICANS -- "We will overhaul loyalty and security programs...We pledge fair but vigorous enforcement of laws to safeguard our country from subversion and disloyalty."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Federal Employee Security -- The President issued Executive Order 10450 on April 27, 1953, to revise the loyalty program established by former President Truman. The new order provided for dismissal of all persons whose employment was not "clearly consistent with the national security." The order classified as "risks" heavy drinkers, sexual perverts, and loose talkers, as well as suspected subversives. Investigations were required for any employee not previously investigated, for new applicants, and for workers previously examined and cleared under the superseded program. Department and agency heads were authorized to discharge employees summarily in the interests of national security. The Civil Service Commission's Loyalty Review Board was replaced by hearing boards of three federal officials drawn from outside the accused employee's department.

Security Separations -- The Administration announced that, by Sept. 29, 1955, 9,270 employees had been separated from government service under terms of the Eisenhower program. Of the total, 3,586 were dismissed and 5,684 resigned. The breakdown:

2,345 with information in their files "indicating, in various degrees, subversive activities, subversive associations, or membership in subversive organizations"

837 with information indicating sexual perversion

2,983 with information indicating conviction of felonies or misdemeanors

5,195 with information of "any other type within the purview...of Executive Order 10450, as amended."

Some employees were in more than one category. Democrats challenged the claims as distorted.

Anti-Subversion Legislation -- President Eisenhower in 1954 transmitted legislative recommendations proposed by Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., to combat subversion.

CONGRESS

Ban on Communist Party -- Enacted, with only two dissenting votes, a 1954 bill designed to outlaw the Communist Party through revocation of its legal rights and immunities. The bill originally was designed to deny legal standing to Communist-infiltrated labor organizations. The Senate unanimously accepted an amendment to outlaw the party and make membership a crime. This provision was toned down by the House. As enacted, the law did not make membership a crime, but said the party "should be outlawed."

President's Anti-Subversion Program -- The eight Presidential proposals enacted -- all but one of them in 1954 -- with bipartisan support:

Compel some witnesses in proceedings involving national security to testify, despite claims of guarantees against compulsory self-incrimination, by granting them immunity from prosecution.

Forfeit the nationality (citizenship rights) of persons convicted of conspiring to advocate violent overthrow of the government.

Authorize capital punishment of peacetime -- as well as wartime -- espionage.

Broaden sabotage laws to take account of such techniques as radiological and biological warfare.

Increase penalties for harboring fugitives.

Make bail-jumping in federal cases a crime.

Extend the statute of limitations in certain cases from three to five years.

Reward persons who furnish information on illegal importation, manufacture, or acquisition of atomic materials or weapons; 1955 law.

Congress did not enact six Presidential proposals to:

Broaden requirements for registration of foreign agents.

Broaden requirements for registration of persons trained in sabotage and espionage.

Permit use of wiretap evidence in security cases.

Broaden the definition of perjury.

Bar subversives from private facilities indirectly concerned with defense.

Establish procedures for dissolving Communist-controlled business or labor organizations in a position to affect national security.

Security Study -- Congress in 1955 created a bipartisan 12-member Commission on Government Security to study the entire federal security program and report its findings to Congress by Dec. 31, 1956.

Statehood

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We urge immediate statehood for these two territories (Alaska and Hawaii)."

REPUBLICANS -- "We favor immediate statehood for Hawaii...statehood for Alaska under an equitable enabling act...eventual statehood for Puerto Rico."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Asked Congress to grant statehood to Hawaii; said Alaska "should expect to achieve statehood...as the complex problems (of the territory) are resolved."

Submitted no recommendations on statehood for Puerto Rico.

CONGRESS

The House passed a 1953 bill granting statehood to Hawaii. The Senate amended the House bill in 1954 to include Alaska. The amended version died when the House Rules Committee refused to allow the bill to go to a conference committee. The House in 1955 recommitted (killed) a bill to grant statehood to both territories. A majority of Republicans generally supported Hawaiian statehood and opposed statehood for Alaska. A majority of Democrats voted to admit both territories at the same time. However, a large minority of House Democrats voted with the Republican majority to kill the joint statehood measure in 1955. Congress did not consider statehood for Puerto Rico.

Civil Rights

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We will continue our efforts to eradicate discrimination based on race, religion or national origin...We are determined that the federal government shall continue...policies (of) securing equality of treatment and opportunity in the nation's armed forces and the civil service and all areas under federal jurisdiction ...We favor federal legislation...to secure...(1) the right to equal opportunity for employment; (2) the right to security of persons; (3) the right to full and equal participation in the nation's political life, free from arbitrary restraints."

REPUBLICANS -- "...we believe that the federal government should take...action (supplementing state action) within its constitutional jurisdiction to oppose discrimination against race, religion or national origin. We will prove our good faith by:...federal action toward the elimination of lynching...federal action toward the elimination of poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting...enacting federal legislation to further just and equitable treatment in the area of discriminatory employment practices."

Performance

The Administration acted against discrimination in areas under federal jurisdiction and successfully argued before the Supreme Court for an end to segregation in public schools. No civil rights legislation was requested by the President or passed by Congress.

ADMINISTRATION

School Segregation -- Urged prohibition of racial segregation in public schools in a brief filed with the Supreme Court in November, 1953.

Fair Employment -- Created the Government Contract Committee in 1953 to help prevent hiring and firing discrimination on jobs under federal contracts. Strengthened, by executive order in 1954, the non-discrimination clause in federal contracts. Created the President's Committee on Government Employment Policy in 1955 to prevent discrimination against government employees.

Segregation in Armed Forces -- Continued the elimination of segregation. The Defense Department reported that, as of August 31, 1954, there were "no longer any all-Negro units in the services." Ordered the Army, Navy, and Air Force to end segregation in all military post schools by Sept. 1, 1955.

Travel Restrictions -- Successfully urged, in a brief filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1954, an end to racial segregation in interstate travel.

CONGRESS

Did not pass any civil rights legislation. A Senate committee reported a bill in 1954 to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, religion, or ancestry, but the measure was not brought up for debate. The House Rules Committee refused in 1954 to clear for debate a bill to prohibit segregation of passengers in public vehicles in interstate commerce. An amendment to ban segregation in the National Guard was accepted by the House in 1955, but later was omitted in the revised military reserves bill.

Government Reorganization

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We pledge our support to continuing reorganization wherever improvements can be made."

REPUBLICANS -- "We pledge a thorough reorganization of the federal government in accordance with the principles set forth in the report of the Hoover Commission."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

President Eisenhower in 1953 and 1954 sent Congress 12 plans to reorganize federal operations.

Key points of the plans:

Established the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to replace the Federal Security Agency.

Authorized adaptation of Agriculture Department activities to local conditions and decentralization of administration.

Centralized defense stockpiling operations in a permanent Office of Defense Mobilization.

Shuffled responsibilities of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Established the Foreign Operations Administration to take over functions of the Mutual Security Agency, Technical Cooperation Administration, and Institute of Inter-American Affairs; FOA later was abolished and its functions transferred to the State and Defense Departments.

Established an independent United States Information Agency.

Restored membership of the Council of Economic Advisers to three, and expanded the chairman's responsibilities.

Transferred responsibility for payment of direct airline subsidies from the Post Office Department to the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Centralized claims operations in a new Foreign Claims Settlement Commission.

Divided liquidated Reconstruction Finance Corporation functions among the Export-Import Bank, Small Business Administration, and Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The reorganization proposals were derived primarily from recommendations by the President's Committee on Government Organization, which screened reports by the first Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

CONGRESS

Reorganization Plans -- Allowed all 12 of the President's reorganization plans to take effect. Efforts to block the Agriculture and Defense Department plans were rejected by roll-call votes. A majority of Democrats voted to disapprove the two plans.

Second Hoover Commission -- Congress enacted, with bipartisan support, a 1953 bill setting up a second Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. The Commission was given greater powers than its predecessor. It was authorized to recommend changes in government policies and the elimination of duplicating functions, as well as procedural reorganization. The Commission filed its 19th and final report to Congress June 30, 1955. The reports listed about $8.5 billion in possible savings if Commission recommendations were followed. They included proposals for basic changes in well-intrenched federal policies and programs.

Reorganization Authority -- Congress extended to June 1, 1957, the authority of the President to submit reorganization plans to Congress. Unless vetoed by a constitutional majority (half the full membership plus one) of either house, the plans take effect in 60 days. Both parties supported the extension.

TAXES, ECONOMIC POLICY

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We believe in fair and equitable taxation. We oppose a federal general sales tax. We adhere to the principle of ability to pay...As rapidly as defense requirements permit, we favor reducing taxes, especially for people with lower incomes...We will not imperil our nation's security by making reckless promises to reduce taxes...We pledge continued efforts to the elimination of (tax) loopholes."

REPUBLICANS -- "We advocate...reduction of expenditures by the elimination of waste and extravagance so that the budget will be balanced and a general tax reduction can be made...an immediate study directed toward reallocation of fields of taxation between the federal, state and municipal governments so as to allow greater fiscal freedom to the states and municipalities...(and) a thorough revision and codification of the present hodgepodge of internal revenue laws..."

Performance

About $7.4 billion in tax reductions took effect during 1953-55. The President requested reductions totaling about $1.3 billion -- primarily through revision of the tax code. Congress upped the cut to $2.4 billion. In addition, about $5 billion in tax reductions took effect as scheduled under 1950 and 1951 revenue laws. Democrats failed in efforts to enact additional cuts in personal income taxes.

ADMINISTRATION

Tax Cuts and Revisions -- Asked Congress in 1954 to overhaul the Internal Revenue Code. The proposed revisions contemplated reduction of individual income taxes by $585 million and corporation taxes by $600 million to $700 million in fiscal 1955. Among the proposed revisions:

- Reduce taxes on income from dividends.
- Increase deductions for medical expenses.
- Allow deductions for some costs of child care.
- Exempt portions of retirement income from taxation.
- Liberalize tax treatment of business expenses for depreciation, research, and development.

Tax Extensions -- Asked Congress to:

Extend the excess profits tax, scheduled to expire July 1, 1953, to Jan. 1, 1954.

Extend existing excise tax rates, scheduled for reduction April 1, 1954, to April 1, 1956; maintain annual yield of excise taxes at about $10 billion.

Extend existing corporation income tax rates, scheduled for reduction from 52 percent to 47 percent on April 1, 1954, to April 1, 1956.

Tax Study -- Asked Congress in 1953 to establish a commission to study federal-state-local government relations, with emphasis on taxation problems.

CONGRESS

Tax Cuts and Revisions -- Enacted the first complete revision of the federal tax code in 75 years, cutting individual taxes $827 million and corporation taxes $536 million. Among the 1954 revisions:

- Reduced taxes on income from dividends; the compromise cut these taxes less than the President had proposed.
- Increased deductions for medical expenses.
- Allowed deductions for some costs of child care.
- Eased taxes on retirement income.
- Accelerated depreciation write-offs.

Cut excise taxes $1 billion in 1954, with bipartisan support.

Took no action to block scheduled cuts of $3 billion in individual income taxes Jan. 1, 1954; and $2 billion in corporation excess profits taxes Jan. 1, 1954 -- six months later than the original schedule.

Rejected Democratic attempts to increase personal tax exemptions from $600 to $700, instead of cutting taxes on dividend income, in 1954; and to grant individual income tax credits, while extending corporation and excise tax rates for a longer period than the President had recommended, in 1955.

Tax Extensions -- Extended, with bipartisan support: Existing excise tax rates on alcoholic beverages, gasoline, autos, trucks, buses, automotive parts and accessories, and diesel fuel -- scheduled for reduction April 1, 1954 -- to April 1, 1956.

Existing corporation income tax rates -- scheduled for reduction from 52 percent to 47 percent on April 1, 1954 -- to April 1, 1956.

Tax Study -- Established in 1953, with bipartisan support, a Commission on Intergovernmental Relations to study taxation and other problems of federal, state, and local government relations. The Commission, reporting in June, 1955, urged Congress to consider the problems of overlapping federal, state, and local taxes.

Tax Loopholes -- Repealed in 1955, with bipartisan support, so-called "loophole" sections of the 1954 Internal Revenue Code relating to reserves for estimated expenses and prepaid income. The repealed sections could have cost the government as much as $1 billion in revenue losses, according to the Treasury Department.

Government Spending

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We believe in keeping government expenditures to the lowest practicable level...We pledge ourselves to a vigilant review of our expenditures in order to reduce them as much as possible."

REPUBLICANS – "Our goal is a balanced budget, a reduced national debt, an economical administration... We advocate...reduction of expenditures by the elimination of waste and extravagance..."

Performance

Congress reduced appropriations, and federal spending was cut in 1953-55. The deficit decreased, but the budget was not balanced and the national debt was higher than in 1952. The Administration said in 1955 that it might balance the budget by June 30, 1956.

ADMINISTRATION

Spending -- Total net federal expenditures, compared to the $74.3 billion spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased 9 percent to $67.8 billion
Fiscal 1955, decreased 13 percent to $64.5 billion
Fiscal 1956, decreased 14 percent to $63.8 billion (estimated).

Budget Balance -- The Budget deficit -- the excess of federal expenditures over federal receipts -- compared to the $9.4 billion deficit in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased 67 percent to $3.1 billion
Fiscal 1955, decreased 55 percent to $4.2 billion
Fiscal 1956, decreased 82 percent to $1.7 billion (estimated).

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey and Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes said in 1955 that the budget could and "should" be balanced by June 30, 1956.

National Debt -- The public (national) debt July 1, 1955, was $274.4 billion -- 6 percent over the $259.1 billion debt on July 1, 1952. The President asked Congress in 1953 to increase the statutory ceiling on the debt from $275 billion to $290 billion. Congress refused the $15 billion increase in 1953. The President renewed his request, without specifying the amount, in 1954 and 1955.

CONGRESS

Appropriations -- Total direct appropriations, compared to the $75.3 billion appropriated in 1952 -- mostly for fiscal 1953, partly for fiscal 1952:

1953, decreased to $54.5 billion; 8 percent below President Eisenhower's requests and 21 percent below estimates by ex-President Truman
1954, decreased to $47.6 billion; 5 percent below President's request
1955, decreased to $53.1 billion; 4 percent below request.

National Debt -- Congress refused the President's request for a $15 billion permanent increase in the federal debt limit. Despite Democratic opposition, the House passed a 1953 bill granting the increase, but the Senate did not act. Temporary $6 billion increases -- to $281 billion -- were granted in 1954 and 1955. Both parties supported the one-year increases.

VOTE

Increase the statutory limit on the public debt from $275 billion to $290 billion. Passed by one chamber.

Highways

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "In cooperation with state and local governmental units, we will continue to plan, coordinate, finance, and encourage the expansion of our road and highway network, including access roads, for the dual purposes of national defense and efficient motor transportation. We support expansion of farm-to-market roads."

REPUBLICANS -- No plank, other than endorsement of "economically justifiable public works."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Appointed the President's Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program (the "Clay Committee") in 1954, and in 1955 asked Congress to enact a nationwide highway program along the lines recommended by the Committee. The Committee proposed a 10-year, $101 billion program, with most of the federal share financed through sale of more than $20 billion in bonds excluded from the national debt. The plan called for federal expenditures of about $31 billion, most of it for the 40,000-mile interstate highway system.

CONGRESS

Authorized, in 1954, nearly $2 billion in federal aid to highways -- to be matched by the states -- during fiscal 1956-57. The authorization was the largest federal outlay for highways ever approved. Both parties supported the bill, which increased funds for primary, secondary ("farm-to-market"), and urban roads, and contained the first sizable grant -- $175 million per year -- for the interstate highway system.

Enacted no national highway legislation in 1955, rejecting the Administration's 10-year, bond-financed program and Democratic-sponsored substitutes. The Senate rejected the Administration's plan for a $31 billion federal contribution to a $101 billion program, and then passed a bill to authorize $12.3 billion for the federal share of a five-year, $17.3 billion program. The Senate bill generally followed the lines of past road bills, but more than doubled the funds to be allocated. No new financing method was specified. The House rejected both the Administration plan and a Democratic-sponsored bill to authorize a 13-year, $48.5 billion program. The $35 billion federal share would have been financed by a 16-year levy of additional taxes on trucks, buses, tires, and fuel.

VOTES

Substitute the Administration's bond-financed highway plan for Democratic-sponsored bills. Rejected.

Power and Water

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We favor sound, progressive development of the nation's land and water resources for flood control, navigation, irrigation, power, drainage, soil conservation...We favor the acceleration of all such projects, including construction of transmission facilities to load centers for wider and more equitable distribution of electric energy at the lowest cost to the consumer with continuing preference to public agencies and REA cooperatives.... The Democratic party...pledges itself to protect (natural) resources from destructive monopoly and exploitation. We pledge the continued full and unified regional development of the water, mineral and other natural resources of the nation."

REPUBLICANS -- "We favor continuous and comprehensive investigations of our water resources and orderly execution of programs approved by the Congress...with immediate priority for those with defense significance, those in critical flood and water-shortage areas, and those substantially completed. We favor greater local participation in the operation and control, and eventual local ownership, of federally sponsored, reimbursable water projects. We vigorously oppose...efforts...in California and elsewhere to undermine state control over water use...and to establish all-powerful federal socialistic valley authorities."

Performance

A decline in federal development of power and water resources during 1953-55 was reflected in reduced expenditures for construction of projects. Congress cut appropriations for federal resource programs and the Administration emphasized a "partnership" policy to encourage non-federal interests to develop resources. The President advocated federal construction of large projects considered beyond the means of local and private groups. He asked Congress to authorize development of the Upper Colorado River Basin and the Fryingpan-Arkansas units. Congress did not comply.

ADMINISTRATION

Resource Policy -- Formulated a "partnership policy" to encourage local public and private interests to develop power and water resources. The policy contemplated federal contributions, when necessary, to pay for features of projects developed for "national purposes, such as flood control," with non-federal payment for other features, such as power. Advocated all-federal construction of projects which, because of "size and complexity, are beyond the means or needs of local public or private enterprise."

Power Marketing Policy -- The Interior Department in 1953 proposed to modify the system by which REA cooperatives and local governments in the Missouri River Basin were guaranteed preference in the purchase of public power. The preference customers were to estimate their future power needs. The Department was to enter long-term contracts to sell to non-preference customers power remaining beyond these estimated needs. Preference customers protested and Congressional hearings were held. The Department revised its policy to limit contracts with non-preference customers to short terms, after which power could be "recaptured" for preference customers.

Resource Spending -- Federal expenditures for construction of facilities related to development of water resources, compared to the $1 billion spent in fiscal 1952 and again in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $917.8 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $834.9 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $699.6 million (estimated) -- 33 percent below the fiscal 1952 and 1953 level.

Both multi-purpose and single-purpose projects were included in these totals. Federal expenditures for construction of multi-purpose dams and reservoirs with hydroelectric power facilities, compared to the $440 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $339.2 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $263.8 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $246.8 million (estimated).

Flood control works, compared to the $185 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $111.2 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $121.6 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $141.3 million (estimated).

Irrigation and water conservation works, compared to the $89.5 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $79 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $77.3 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, increased to $90.2 million (estimated).

Navigation facilities, compared to the $52.5 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $33 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $51 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, increased to $93.6 million (estimated).

Power transmission facilities, compared to the $118.2 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $117 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $94.7 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $81.4 million (estimated).

Tennessee Valley Authority steam-electric power plants, compared to the $152.2 million spent in fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, increased to $238.4 million
Fiscal 1955, increased to $226.5 million (estimated)
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $43.9 million (estimated).

No funds were spent for beach erosion control during fiscal 1953-55; an estimated $2.4 million was to be spent in fiscal 1956.

Resource Projects -- Upper Colorado, Fryingpan-Arkansas: Asked Congress to authorize federal development of the Upper Colorado River Basin in Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming, and the Fryingpan-Arkansas project in Colorado. The President estimated the total cost of the two projects at $1.1 billion; as amended, the bills carried larger estimates, and the ultimate cost remained uncertain.

St. Lawrence: Asked Congress in 1954 to authorize federal construction, in cooperation with Canada, of a St. Lawrence Seaway navigation project, at an estimated cost to the U.S. of $105 million. The Federal Power Commission in 1954 approved construction by the New York State Power Authority of a power project in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River.

Hells Canyon: The Interior Department withdrew its opposition -- filed during the Truman Administration -- to private construction of three dams at Hells Canyon on the Snake River on the Idaho-Oregon border. FPC in 1955 approved applications by the Idaho Power Company, a private firm, to build the three dams. Advocates of public power favored federal construction of a single high dam at the site.

Niagara: Asked Congress in 1954 to authorize non-federal development of a power project at Niagara Falls.

Partnership Projects: Requested authorizations in 1954 and 1955 to pay the federal share of costs for construction of a series of partnership water resource projects in cooperation with local public and private groups.

Dixon-Yates -- The President in 1954 ordered the Atomic Energy Commission to contract with the Dixon-Yates combine for private-enterprise construction of a $107 million generating plant to feed power into the Tennessee Valley Authority system to supply Memphis, Tenn. The power was to replace an equivalent amount supplied by TVA to the AEC. The Administration in 1955 asked Congress to appropriate funds for transmission lines to link the proposed Dixon-Yates plant to TVA. Opponents of the contract challenged it on the basis of cost to the federal government, financing provisions, and effect on future expansion of TVA. Memphis announced plans in June, 1955, to build its own power plant. In July, 1955, the Administration ordered the Dixon-Yates contract canceled.

CONGRESS

Partnership Program -- The House and Senate passed, with bipartisan support, different versions of a 1955 bill to authorize federal cooperation in non-federal reclamation projects and participation by non-federal agencies in federal projects, but the measure was not reported from the conference committee.

Power Marketing Policy -- Banned the use of Southwestern Power Administration funds to carry out lease-purchase contracts to pay REA cooperatives in Missouri and Oklahoma for the use of generating and transmission facilities. Opponents said the contracts would require the federal government to pay for the use of facilities which had been constructed with funds it had lent to the cooperatives. Supporters said repudiation of the contracts would jeopardize power requirements of preference customers. The 1953 ban was repealed in 1955, when Congress ordered reactivation of the contracts without the lease-purchase provisions.

Dixon-Yates -- Affirmed, in 1954, the Atomic Energy Commission's authority to contract for private power to replace TVA power supplied to AEC. Appropriated $6.5 million in 1955 for transmission lines to link the proposed Dixon-Yates plant to TVA. The appropriation was to lapse if Memphis decided to build its own power plant -- as it did.

Navigation and Flood Control -- Enacted in 1954, with bipartisan support, an omnibus authorization for construction of 184 flood control, navigation, and beach erosion control projects. The measure was the first omnibus authorization in this field since 1950. Authorized in 1955 a $15 million emergency fund for protection and repair of flood control works, for flood fighting, and for rescue operations.

Appropriations -- Direct appropriations for TVA and for the Bonneville, Southeastern, and Southwestern Power Administrations, compared to the $416.6 million appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $236.3 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $153.9 million
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $50.8 million.

Appropriations for navigation and flood control projects by the Army Corps of Engineers, compared to the $562 million appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $423.2 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $443.4 million
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $559.5 million.

Total direct appropriations for the Bureau of Reclamation -- which constructs and operates water and power facilities -- compared to the $206.4 million appropriated for fiscal 1953:

Fiscal 1954, decreased to $143.7 million
Fiscal 1955, decreased to $163.2 million
Fiscal 1956, decreased to $180 million.

Resource Projects -- Upper Colorado: The Senate in 1955 passed, with bipartisan support, a bill to authorize $1.1 billion for a federal Upper Colorado River Basin project, but the House did not act. Authorization bills were reported to both House and Senate in 1954 but did not reach floor votes.

Fryingpan-Arkansas: The Senate passed a federal authorization bill in 1954, with bipartisan support, but the House killed the measure when a majority of Democrats voted against consideration. There was no floor action on an authorization in 1955.

St. Lawrence: Federal construction, in cooperation with Canada, of the St. Lawrence Seaway navigation project was authorized in 1954, with bipartisan support. The measure established a corporation to sell $105 million in revenue bonds to the U.S. Treasury.

Hells Canyon: No action was taken on a Democratic-sponsored bill in 1955 to authorize federal construction of a $500 million multi-purpose dam.

Niagara: The House in 1953 passed, despite opposition by a majority of Democrats, a bill to authorize private development of hydroelectric power at Niagara Falls. The Senate did not act on the House bill or on its own 1954 bill to let the Federal Power Commission decide whether power at Niagara should be developed by the federal government, by New York state, or by private industry.

Trinity River: Congress in 1955 authorized, despite opposition by a majority of House Republicans, federal construction of a $225 million project at the Trinity River division of the Central Valley project in California.

Partnership Projects: Congress in 1954 authorized, with bipartisan support, non-federal development of projects at Priest Rapids, Wash.; Coosa River, Ala.; and Markham Ferry, Okla. Federal payment for flood control and navigation features of these projects was authorized. The Senate rejected a Democratic-sponsored amendment to require preference to rural cooperatives and municipalities in interstate sale of power from Priest Rapids. Several partnership projects proposed by the Administration were not authorized.

Monopoly -- A Senate subcommittee in January, 1955, charged that "private monopoly" was trying to "destroy public competition in the power business." Hearings on mergers in the power industry were held in 1955.

Controls

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- "We pledge continuance of workable controls so long as the emergency requires them...fair and impartial enforcement of controls and their removal as quickly as economic conditions allow. We strongly urge continued federal rent control in critical defense areas and in the many other localities still suffering from a substantial shortage of adequate housing at reasonable prices."

REPUBLICANS -- "We shall remove...injurious price and wage controls...We will oppose federal rent control except in those areas where the expansion of defense production has been accompanied by critical housing shortages...We believe in combatting inflation by encouraging full production of goods and food, and not through a program of restrictions."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

Rent -- Asked Congress in 1953 to end federal rent control "as soon as practicable," but recommended that controls in defense areas with serious housing shortages be continued beyond June 30, 1953.

Prices and Wages -- Ordered, in February, 1953, termination of all controls over wages and salaries, and removal of price controls in seven steps.

Defense Materials -- Asked Congress in 1953 and 1955 to extend the Defense Production Act, authorizing the federal government to ration scarce defense materials to industry.

CONGRESS

Rent -- Ended, with bipartisan support, federal rent controls in all but critical defense housing areas effective July 31, 1953, and extended controls in "critical" areas through April 30, 1954.

Prices and Wages -- The Senate in 1953 voted to authorize the President to impose a 90-day freeze on prices, wages, and rents if Congress should declare war or a national emergency. The authority was included in a bill to extend the Defense Production Act. A majority of Senate Democrats blocked attempts to eliminate the freeze authority, but the House rejected the provisions in an unrecorded vote. A Senate-House conference committee killed the freeze authority.

Defense Materials -- Extended through June 30, 1956, Defense Production Act authorizations for the federal government to allocate scarce defense materials to industry. Both parties supported the extensions, voted in 1953 and 1955.

VOTES

Delete standby wage, price, and rent controls from Defense Production Act extension. Rejected (provisions retained), but the final version of the bill omitted these controls.

Tideland

Platforms

DEMOCRATS -- No plank.

REPUBLICANS -- "We favor restoration to the states of their rights to all lands and resources beneath navigable inland and offshore waters within their historic boundaries."

Performance

ADMINISTRATION

President Eisenhower asked Congress in 1953 to confirm the states' title to submerged land within their historic coastal boundaries -- known as "tidelands" -- and to reaffirm federal jurisdiction over submerged land in the continental shelf beyond state boundaries.

The Supreme Court in 1955 rejected a request by Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., for a ruling that Louisiana's boundary lay three miles from its shore, rather than 10.5 miles.

CONGRESS

Surrendered to coastal states title to submerged lands and natural resources within their historic boundaries. The 1953 bill also proclaimed federal jurisdiction over the resources of submerged lands beyond the states' offshore boundaries. A majority of Senate Democrats, joined by a few Republicans, opposed the bill. They called it a "giveaway" to coastal states of resources belonging to the entire nation.

Congress then enacted a separate bill reaffirming exclusive federal control over submerged lands in the continental shelf beyond historic state boundaries. The measure authorized the U.S. to lease the lands to private industry and assigned to the federal government certain royalties from oil, gas, and sulphur production. Both parties supported the bill on original passage, but a majority of Senate Democrats opposed the version that emerged from conference. The conference committee deleted a Senate amendment to earmark federal revenues from the continental shelf for defense during the national emergency and for aid to education thereafter.

VOTES

Confirm the states' title to submerged lands and natural resources within their historic boundaries. Passed.
